It is evident the women of Cottage Grove do not care to get into print on any subject. Some weeks ago the Leader announced that a section of the paper would be set apart each week for their use, for the discussion of any matter of interest to them on religion, politics, domestic matters, club news, or any other topic they might choose. So far, not one line has been contributed. The offer has not been withdrawn and will not be until this paper is thoroughly convinced that the ladies of the community fully understand the offer and signify their utter disregard for the opportunity to take advantage of it.

The ladies enjoyed the visit to the green hills, fruit orchards and stock ranches very much.

F. H. Hall returned Wednesday from a three weeks visit with his son at Coquille. He says he enjoyed the trip very much—all but the stage ride, which he considers the most inhuman of tortures. He has an idea that about the proper thing to do would be to arrest and fine the stage line people for cruelty to passengers.

It is estimated that there are no less than four hundred thousand foreigners working for wages in the United States who send all their earnings except the barest living, to their home countries in Europe, Asia and Africa. Figure that up will you, and see what it means in losses to the working and business men of the land. Suppose they only save up 50 cents each per day to send away, it means 60 million dollars every twelve months that rightfully belong to American citizens who pay taxes and support this government.

What Made the Spartans Fearless.
Among the forgotten dishes of the past was the "black broth of Lacedaemon." "What the ingredients of this subtle composition were," says a writer, "we cannot exactly ascertain. Dr. Lister (in 'Aplcius') supposes it to have been hog's blood. * * * It could not be a very alluring mess, since a citizen of Sybaris, having tasted it, declared it was no longer a matter of astonishment with him why the Spartans were so fearless of death, since any one in his senses would much rather die than exist on such execrable food."

OUR BUSINESS has increased to the extent that it is necessary to have help. We have secured the services of one of the best artists in Eugene, Miss Grace Batten, who will arrive about May 1st.
We are sure you will be pleased with her work.
