GOOD REPORTS FROM THE BOHEMIA DISTRICT

Active Development Work to be Prosecuted This Summer on the Star Mining Company's Property.

H. S. Cline and father, Walter Cline, came in Monday from the Bohemia mining district east of Cottage Grove, and brought with them excellent reports of that rich mineral section.

The Messrs. Cline are associated with Fred Bartels, John Bartels, E. R. Miner and Giles Fowler, of this city, in the ownership of the Star Mining group of four claims, located on the head of Martin Creek, in the western part of the Bohemia Mining District, and the object of their visit to Cottage Grove at this time is to consult with the others interested with them in the property and consummate definite plans for the immediate starting up of the five-stamp mill and the prosecution of extensive development work.

Mr. H. S. Cline called at the Leader office and from him the reporter learned that there was considerable mining activity in the district and that development work on many properties had continued throughout the past winter. On the south two claims of the Star Mining Company's group the property is developed by 1,000 feet of tunnel and cross-cut work, the tunnel tapping the ledge at a depth of 380 feet, showing a well defined vein of rich ore 18 inches in width. The ledge runs east and west with a heavy dip of about 35 degrees to the south and an average width of from 8 inches to 2 feet. No assays have ever been made on the ore, that not being considered necessary as the rock is all rich and free milling and the gold can be seen in much of it with the naked eye. John Bartels has spent much time at the property during the past winter aiding the Messrs. Cline in doing trail work and opening tunnels to place the property in shape for extensive working and development this summer.

Mr. Cline had with him a small vial of virgin gold which he obtained from some of the rock pounded up and washed in a gold pan that looked good and attracted the interest of many of our citizens.

On the north two claims of the Star Mining Company's group there is an immense body of low grade ore that assays from $4 to $7 to the ton, and which will prove a profitable producer once a smelter is erected in the district for the treatment of base ores.

Sherman Clark and brother are doing tunnel work on the Combination group owned by them, and Sam Burghardt, who has a group of claims a mile west of the Star Mining Company's property, intends going in next Monday to renew development work. He is driving a tunnel to strike the same vein on which the two south claims of the Star Mining Company are located.

Mr. Cline and father returned to Bohemia today and intend to have the stamps dropping on rich ore in a very short time.

Society Notes

The members of Cottage Grove chapter, O. E. S., surprised their marshal, Mrs. Anna Graham, with a pleasant social evening and a handkerchief shower after the regular meeting held last Friday evening. Mrs. Graham leaves soon for her home in Wauna, and the Chapter realizes that it is losing a faithful and very efficient officer. Dainty refreshments were served at the close of the evening.

The executive committee of the Presbyterian Ladies' Aid Society met at the home of the president, Mrs. B. R. Job, last Friday afternoon, and planned the work of the Society for the coming year.

The Philathea class met for Bible study at the home of Miss Florence Protzman on Monday afternoon. The subject of the lesson was "The Prodigal Son." Ten members were present.

April 26th being the anniversary of the I. O. F. lodge, the members and their families, and the Rebekah's and their families, to the number of 200, assembled at their hall Saturday, April 25th and celebrated the event. A splendid program was rendered and delicious refreshments were served. Sunday morning the Odd Fellows and Rebekahs attended the M. E. church in a body and listened to a fine sermon by Rev. Aldrich, the subject being "The Helpfulness of Religion."

The Grangers Will Welcome You

The Lecturer of the Cottage Grove Grange announces the following program for the lecture hour on May 2, from 1:00 to 2:00. "Essential Improvements in Farm Conditions."—Mrs. Curtis Veatch.

"Utilizing the Parcel Post,"—W. G. McFarland.

"Moral Degeneracy Due to Neglect,"—A Stevens.

General discussions of above topics. Reading, recitations, music.

You are cordially invited to attend, if interested along any of these lines or in the causes which the Grange seeks to promote.

Getting Ready For Heavy Travel

H. C. Oliver, Traveling Freight and Passenger Agent of the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation Co., who is registered at the Hotel Oregon, says the railroads are making preparations to bring everybody in the East and Middle West to the Pacific Coast next year. He looks for a big advance guard travel during the coming fall and winter—prospective settlers who want to get ahead of the rush.

SCHOOL NOTES

The school attendance still remains high. The per cent for last month was 97.7.

The appearance of the grounds is being greatly improved in front of the High school building.

The domestic science class each week gives a dinner to the students. Each student who eats is charged fifteen cents to help pay for the groceries.

Miss Currin made a trip to Eugene Tuesday.

The seniors have begun work on their class play "Hicks at College," which will be given commencement week.

An Appeal to the Sense of Beauty

By EUNICE BLAKE

Dr. Worthington was the physician of the upper ten thousand—not a physician of the upper ten thousand, but the physician of that class. He was thirty-five years old and considered the handsomest man of the city in which he lived and practiced his profession.

One night a lamp exploded in the home of a young widow, setting fire to the clothes of an old lady, a member of the family, and burning her so severely that she lived but twenty-four hours after the accident. Every doctor in the neighborhood was called in, among them Dr. Worthington. There was little that could be done for the patient, who was known to every doctor there, but there was a great deal to be done in calming those present. As soon as the physician of the upper ten thousand entered practitioners earning a beggarly $5,000 to $10,000 a year instinctively withdrew into their shells, and when he spoke in his musical baritone voice a few words enjoining quiet a calm fell upon every one in the room.

Mrs. Allandale, the young widow in whose house the accident occurred, was so impressed with Dr. Worthington's aristocratic bearing, his self control and that influence he possessed over his fellow beings, especially women, that she resolved to win him for her second husband. Mrs. Allandale had heard a story about the doctor's having to employ a chaperon at his office and realized that her game must be played with great delicacy in order to be successful.

About a week after the death and burial of the person who was burned Dr. Worthington was called to visit Mrs. Allandale. He responded at once and found the lady reclining in her library, where logs blazed in a gothic fireplace. She had on a pale blue silk negligee—she was a blond—and a lamp shaded in pink was on a little table beside her. The blue was especially becoming, and the pink lamplight on her complexion added to the pleasing effect. Dr. Worthington was perfectly aware from the moment he entered the room that the lady's intentions were those of women from whom his duenna was expected to protect him. But, oh, how different this appeal from the others!

The lady did not extend her finger tips; she did not smile; she simply said:

"Doctor, in the dreadful experience we have had in this house my nerves have been severely strained. I sleep very badly, have no appetite and am subject to a twitching of the muscles, especially when passing into a slumber. I would like you to give me a sedative, a tonic or whatever you think I require."

The doctor placed the tips of his thumb and fingers on the lady's wrist, looked wise, sympathetic and respectful, all in one glance; then, taking out a blank slip, wrote a prescription.

"This is merely a light sedative," he said. "I do not attach much importance to it, for the shock you have received must wear off gradually. I would advise diverting your mind so far as possible—social affairs that are to your liking—nothing that will bore you—amusements and, above all, the company of those with whom you are congenial and who interest you."

"Thank you, doctor. I dare say you are right. I noticed how you quieted us all at the time of the accident, and I rely more on your personal influence than your medicines. I should be glad to have you call as often as your other professional and social engagements will permit, for I feel quieted already. I am quite sure that treatment by influence, such as is practiced by Christian Scientists and other like sects, will do me a world of good. But, of course, I do not mean that you are to give me more of your valuable time than my share."

There was some desultory chat, after which the doctor withdrew, promising to call again in a few days. Mrs. Allandale told him that she required soothing more in the evening than in the daytime and she would be glad when he could find it convenient to call between 8 and 11 o'clock p. m. He promised to do his best in this respect.

A few days later the doctor telephoned Mrs. Allandale that he must visit a patient in her vicinity that evening and would call if she thought he could be of any service. She replied through her maid that she was much depressed and begged that he would surely come.

When the doctor called he found his patient sitting on one end of a sofa, robed this time in a commingling of pink and lace, with a jack rose in her hair, the latter taking the place of the lamp shade that had before given a becoming hue to her complexion. He made bold to sit on the other end of the sofa, and when he felt her pulse he left his fingers on her wrist longer than before.

The doctor's visits became more and more frequent, and every time he called he found Mrs. Allandale in a costume which was a more becoming creation than the last, and at each call there was a different lamplight or screen set near her for heightening or subduing the hue of her complexion or a different flower in her corsage or her hair. What could not be accomplished by ordinary means was brought about by such appeals to the doctor's senses. Her efforts were successful, and in due time he proposed and was accepted.

Her Qualifications.

Mistress (to prospective cook)—Your trines all seem of a negative quality. Haven't you anything else to offer?
The Candidate—Well, yes, ma'am, I have. You see, I worked a year for them high an' mighty Van Dams, an' I now their silverware is plate, an' their best cut glass isn't cut, an' their imported gowns is from Chicago, an' th' old man comes home at 2 in th' mornin', an' th' young Fritchman who is goin' to marry Clytie Dum—she's twenty nine and hosh' her hair is no more a baron than I am a queen. Aw, I know all about 'em.
The Mistress (highly interested)—O second thoughts I'll engage you.—Cleve and Plain Dealer.

APPRECIATION.

Happiness comes not from the power of possession, but from the power of appreciation. Above most other things it is wise to cultivate the powers of appreciation. The greater the number of stops on an organ the greater its possibilities for music.—H. W. Sylvester.

John M. Howe, of Eugene Passes Over

The account of the death of John M. Howe, father of Mrs. K. K. Mills, of Cottage Grove, and well known to many of our people, is taken from the Eugene Daily Guard:

"After a lingering illness of four months John M. Howe died Sunday at 7:20 a. m. at his home at 455 West Twelfth street, aged 59 years, 9 months and 7 days. The cause of his death was heart trouble. Besides a widow, he leaves three sons, Oren P. Howe and Lloyd R. Howe, of Eugene, and Fay D. Howe, of Salem; two daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Mills, of Cottage Grove, and Miss Lola Howe, of Eugene; a mother, Ameraca Cochran, of Salem; and four sisters, Mrs. W. F. Slater and Mrs. Sadie Yantis, of Salem, Mrs. A. Keys, of Seattle and Mrs. Mason Cochran, of Colfax, Washington.

"The deceased was born July 19, 1854, and came to Eugene twenty-four years ago, and for ten years was in the clothing business with the firm of Howe & Rice. Since that time he had been in the real estate business. He came to Oregon from Missouri when he was nine years old, having crossed the plains in 1863, and settled with his parents in Brownsville, where he first started to work in the woolen mills. For twenty years he was a harness maker in Brownville. On December 21, 1877, he was married to Sophronia A. Coshow.

Mr. Howe was a Shriner and thirty-second degree Mason and was very active in Masonic circles. The funeral will be held from the First Baptist church Tuesday, April 28, at 2:30 o'clock and will be in charge of Rev. H. W. Davis. The services at the cemetery will be in charge of the Masonic lodge."

Miss Ada Land Says She's Going to Win

Miss Ada Land, of Dorena, one of the Leader's contestants for a free trip to the World's Fair at San Francisco, was in Cottage Grove over Monday night, and returned to her home Tuesday morning. Miss Land is enthusiastic over her chances to win one of the seven prizes offered by the Leader and will make an active campaign throughout eastern Lane county. She has ordered personal cards printed, and shortly her picture will appear in this paper with those of other candidates. Miss Land has a host of supporters who will all subscribe for the Twice-A-Week Leader to get a real newsy paper, and cast their votes for their favorite and popular candidate.

Auto Collides With a Tree

Saturday evening A. B. Woods was driving the big Moon car belonging to J. B. Protzman, when the machine left the road and ran into a big oak tree standing by the wayside.

It hasn't been fully explained why the car preferred by and forbidden paths to the regular beaten track, but this much is clear—it will have to be pretty generally overhauled and considerably repaired before it is able to do it again.

In the meantime the people who were in the car at the time are thankful that they were able to go home, while car went to the shop.
