Mr. and Mrs. Robertson, late of California, are moving into C. W. Caldwell's property on third street. Mr. Robertson is expecting his parents to arrive from California next week, to take possession of the property on 5th street, which they recently purchased from Bob Martin.

W. E. Thompson, from Long Prairie near Scottsburg, in the sister county on the south, was in Cottage Grove Thursday and took home a Ford car purchased from the local agent. Mr. Thompson was accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Herbert Butler, and a man who drove the car home for him.

William McAdams and Photographer A. J. Armstrong returned from an automobile tour of Central Oregon Thursday. They visited Redmond, Bend and other Central Oregon towns and were not very enthusiastic over what they saw in that section of the state. They report a hard trip over the mountain.

A Missouri newspaper man once said that his was the only newspaper office ever opened with prayer and closed by the sheriff. The Leader reporter didn't arrive early enough at the ball grounds last Friday to learn whether the game between the Methodists and Presbyterians was opened with prayer, or not, but it was closed by darkness at the end of the seventh inning, and was declared a draw—that is, a tie. The debated question as to which church is the better ball player, will possibly be decided at a later date.

Work Begun on Tenth Street

The work of macadamizing 10th street was begun Wednesday, and will be rushed to completion.

So far as the east part of Cottage Grove is concerned, this is the most important piece of street work yet undertaken, as it will form a line into which all other streets on that side of the railroad can feed. With the exception of the macadamizing of Main street, this is the first street work done in that section of town, although this particular street is, and has been, one of the most used for heavy traffic.

A Correction

There was a mistake in the Leader's report of the motorcycle race which took place here last Friday.

The leaders in that race were Matthews and Trask. Edwards came in third. Unfamiliarity with names makes such mistakes easily possible, and the Leader is glad to make the correction.

TWO FAMOUS FOURTHS.

Saw Beginning of Erie Canal and America's First Railroad Line.

July 4 has always been selected as an auspicious one on which to inaugurate important enterprises. July 4, 1817, Governor De Witt Clinton turned the first sod in the construction of the Erie canal, considered a great undertaking. On July 4, 1828, was celebrated the beginning of the first railway in this country, the Baltimore and Ohio.

Charles Carroll of Carrollton, the last surviving signer of the Declaration of Independence, and a member of the first directory of this railroad, was present and turned the first spadeful of earth, saying, "I consider this among the most important acts of my life, second only to that of signing the Declaration of Independence, if indeed, second to that."

To the Blacksmiths' association, which presented to him the pick, spade, hammer and trowel used in the ceremony of dedication, Carroll wrote: "You observe that republics can exist and that the people under that form of government can be happier than under any other. That the republic created by the Declaration of Independence will continue to the end of time is my fervent prayer. That protracted existence, however, will depend on the morality, sobriety and industry of the people, and on no part more than on the mechanics, forming in our cities the greatest number of their most useful inhabitants."—Chicago Record-Herald.

British Earl Fought For America. One of the most interesting figures of the Revolutionary war period in America was the Earl of Stirling, who fought for American Independence. He was the only British peer who served in the American army, and he was a warm friend of George Washington. He held the rank of major general in the American army. Lord Stirling lived the greater part of his life in America, was married to a New York lady and died in Albany, N. Y., in 1783.

July 4 Killed a President.

The cornerstone of the Washington monument at the national capital was laid July 4, 1850. It was a very hot day. President Taylor, who was present, was exposed to the heat of the sun for three hours. On his return to the White House he drank freely of ice water and iced milk and also partook of some cherries. Shortly afterward he was taken ill and died July 9.
