

Teaching the Angels to Fly at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition

Of course angels fly. That's why they have wings. A visit to the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco any day that the winged ladies are taking their places on the roofs of the exhibit palaces will be convincing if the accompanying photograph does not serve that purpose. The particular winged ladies in question are called "the acroteria." There are to be thirty-two of them distributed about the various exhibit palaces. They are thirteen feet in height and weigh about 1,400 pounds; hence the presence of the locomotive crane to assist in their flight to the roofs of the buildings.

"My Mother"—A Prayer

FOR the body you gave me, the bone and the sinew, the heart and the brain that are yours, my mother, I thank you. I thank you for the light in my eyes, the blood in my veins, for my speech, for my life, for my being. All that I am is from you who bore me.

For all the love that you gave me, unmeasured from the beginning, my mother, I thank you. I thank you for the hand that led me, the voice that directed me, the breast that nestled me, the arm that shielded me, the lap that rested me. All that I am is by you, who nursed me.

For your smile in the morning and your kiss at night, my mother, I thank you. I thank you for the tears you shed over me, the songs that you sung to me, the prayers you said for me, for your vigils and ministrations. All that I am is by you, who reared me.

For the faith you had in me, the hope you had for me, for your trust and your pride, my mother, I thank you. I thank you for your praise and your chiding, for the justice you bred into me and the honor you made mine. All that I am you taught me.

For the sore travail I caused you, for the visions and despairs, my mother, forgive me. Forgive me the peril I brought you to, the sobs and moans I wrung from you, and for the strength I took from you, mother, forgive me.

For the fears I gave you, for the alarms and dreads, my mother, forgive me. Forgive me the joys I deprived you, the toils I made for you, for the hours the days and the years I claimed from you, mother, forgive me.

For the times that I hurt you, the times that I had no smile for you, the caresses I did not give you, my mother, forgive me. Forgive me for my angers and revolts, for my deceits and evasions, for all the pangs and sorrows I brought to you mother, forgive me.

For your lessons I did not learn, for your wishes I did not obey, my mother, forgive me. Forgive me my pride in my youth and my glory in strength that forgot the holiness of your years and the veneration of your weakness, for my neglect, for my selfishness, for the great depths of your love that I have not paid, mother, sweet mother, forgive me.

And may the peace and joy that passeth all understanding be yours, my mother for ever and ever. Amen.—Ex.

GUARD AMERICAN INTERESTS

Seventy-three Warships Have Seen Actual Service During the Past Year. Navy Short 18,000 Men and 100 Officers—Not Enough Sailors to Man All the Ships.

Washington.—Seventy-three warships are employed in protecting Americans and their interests in foreign lands, keeping the United States out of the war and backing Uncle Sam's "moral suasion" policy in Latin-American countries. Since Jan. 1, 1913, from one to seventy-three warships, ranging from super-Dreadnoughts to converted yachts, have been performing near war duty somewhere in the world. This list does not include the ships on duty in Asiatic waters, but does include the Tennessee and the North Carolina, now in eastern European waters.

ident Wilson's inauguration. Between Jan. 1 and March 4, 1913, President Taft dispatched a number of smaller warships to Mexican and Central American waters. Immediately Mr. Wilson became president turmoil almost throughout Central America and Mexico began to develop into open warfare.

No sooner had a few ships been dispatched to the east and west coasts of Mexico than trouble began in Venezuela. A revolution over in the western part of Venezuela, said to have been instigated by General Cipriano Castro, former president and dictator of that country, got well under way before the Washington authorities took cognizance of it. At once two warships were dispatched to the Venezuelan coast. Almost at the same time the cork popped from the bottle the Taft administration had closed up in Nicaragua, and it was necessary to send warships to the east and west coasts of Nicaragua, also to maintain the detachment of marines at Managua, the capital of Nicaragua.

Hardly had the anchors on the vessels ordered to Nicaragua been hoisted when a loud explosion was heard in Santo Domingo. A revolution had broken out there for the second time in less than a year. Down to Dominican waters rushed two gunboats. Upon their arrival it was learned that in the adjoining republic, Haiti, a revolution also was under way, and wireless orders sent two cruisers scurrying down there.

The details of this service will be laid before congress this winter when the navy department is called upon to report the operations of the fleet in an effort to obtain additional ships and men. It is the purpose of Secretary Daniels to inform congress that the long service of the ships in tropical and semitropical waters necessitated the placing of several other vessels in reserve because of the insufficient number of men with which to man all the ships. He will tell congress the navy is short now something like 18,000 enlisted men and 100 officers and that in a year from now if no increase is allowed the navy will be short about 22,000 men and about 175 officers.

Becomes Convincing.
