Sardonic Representations of Alleged German Cruelty Typical of Humorist's Exhibition-Soldiers Show Sketches.

Paris .- The dreadful effect of the war on the spirit of humor is illustrated in the exhibition of caricatures organized by the "Humorists" for the benefit of their wounded comrades and of the widows and orphans of artists killed in action. The French genius for making fun of everything has disappeared and the enemy is not seen comically but horribly. The subjects are difficult for caricature, consisting for the most part of alleged atrocities.

The deteriorating influence of the subjects on style is seen abundantly in the contributions of almost all of the caricaturists and illustrators. Forain tries to avoid topical slavishness by using side themes set at the front and suggesting amusing discomenades, colonnaded buildings, churches forts like rain, wind and mud in Flanand palaces. It is all very European ders.
