It's the rule that in small towns like Cottage Grove it's nearly impossible to get the kind of photographic work that's known to be the best; but just now this is not the case in this burg, for the kind of work that Bradford turns out has that fineness of finish and rich tone which at once puts it in the front rank; it is without question as good as can be had even in the cities; there's nothing shoddy or cheap about it; the prices are right—$1 to $4.50 per dozen, according to class of work, style of finish and quality of mountings; Call and see me at the tent near the M.
