W. R. Logus, a genial young man of Portland, has charge of the Wells, Fargo Express and Postal telegraph office in Mr. Awbery's absence at Yaquina Bay, where he is enjoying his annual vacation and recuperating from the injuries received in his collision with a railroad locomotive at the depot recently.

With blood in his eye and hayseed in his hair, a fellow called on us recently and insisted that we "stop the LEADER." We would like to accommodate him, but fear that our other 869 subscribers would object to the suspension of this, their popular household companion. We must admit, however, that the fellow has a just grievance, if, as he says, he "cannot buy a box of toothpicks on credit since an item appeared in our paper last week crediting the product of his year's work sowing and reaping to another party." In estimating the season's bountiful grain yield on the Harding farm last week at something like 8,000 bushels, we credited the whole amount to the elder Conner, when in fact Ed is also interested to the tune of about one-half of the product. We trust this explanation will avert a threatened family feud.

Mrs. D. E. Fields returned home Sunday from Brownsville where she enjoyed a brief but pleasant visit. She has the material on the ground and has the carpenters at work on her new two-story business house one door west of the opera house.
W. A. Ward and Bert Dunham, of Lorane, were transacting business in town Thursday.
