Shakespeare's complete works will be given away by the Leader to the person who secures the greatest number of cash subscriptions to this paper before Sept. 8, 1904. Subscriptions may be new or renewals of old.

The Rev. Father Stravens, of Roseburg, will hold services at the Catholic church next Sunday morning at ten o'clock, and will lecture next Saturday evening at 7:30 on "The Secrets of the Confessional." Everybody is cordially invited.

F. J. Hard and party passed through Cottage Grove Wednesday enroute to Bohemia mining district where they will spend the summer. The company includes Mr. and Mrs. Hard, their daughter Frances, son Charles, Miss Bessie Neilson, stenographer, and Rev. Dr. Horace E. Warner, wife and son of Denver.

Samuel Veatch, the popular conductor on the Albany-Portland run, has returned from a visit to Texas, and the Leader will have some of his impressions to entertain its readers, as Sam has promised to furnish us with a few of his views. He says he likes to see new country and new people, but Oregon is good enough for him.

W. E. Coffin, who lives near Divide, brought to the store of Hemenway & Burkholder Thursday as fine a growth of Logan berries as can be shown anywhere on the Pacific Coast. They are large and rich, being sweet as raspberries. Many of them measure more than 1 1/2 inches in length. The Leader appreciates the gift of a box of them.

The Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. church met at Landess' Grove Wednesday afternoon and had a delightful occasion. Baking refreshments were served. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Frank Wheeler; vice president, Mrs. Ed. Jones; secretary, Mrs. W. A. Hogate; treasurer, Mrs. J. M. Curtin; executive committee, Mesdames Orpud, Jones and Knapp.

G. M. Miller, whose truck farm on

Row river is known for the good quality of its vegetables, reports that the dry season has seriously affected his crop. Last year at this time he marketed 150 dozen beans. This year so far he has brought in only fifty dozen. Beans are growing well, but are not what they ought to be. Better oat hay is reported this year by Mr. Miller than usual. It was fall sown.

The American Physical Type High.

It appears from the annual report of the surgeon general of the United States army that the total number of candidates examined for enlistment was 45,218 and that of this number about two-thirds, or 30,176, were accepted. This is a large proportion when the fact is taken into account that the standard of excellence required is very high, none but physically perfect men being accepted.

Of the 45,218 applicants for enlistment 42,183 were white men and 3,035 were colored men. Of the white men 37,790 were accepted and of the colored men 2,386.

Out of every 1,000 men accepted 781.05 on the average were born in the United States, 64.76 in British territory, 42.25 in Germany and 8.79 in Sweden and Norway. Of 18 American Indians examined 14 were enlisted as scouts.

It is interesting to note that during the year 736 native Malays were examined for enlistment as Philippine scouts and that of these all except 20 were accepted, showing a surprisingly high standard of physique among the Filipinos.—Los Angeles Times.

Historic Cape Cod.

A movement is on foot to mark the historic spots in which the old town of Barnstable, on Cape Cod, abounds. It has been stated that this town contains fully as much of historic interest as Plymouth, and there are many unmarked localities that have been identified with stirring events in the early days of the colonies. The first courthouse built in the county still stands at the head of Rendezvous lane, where the volunteers of the Revolution first assembled, although the building has been transformed into a church. In front of it is the little triangle where the liberty pole stood and where the troops were drilled. In this courthouse was founded the first note of revolt against British rule, and it is proposed to place inscribed tablets on these spots and others equally interesting to commemorate and preserve the traditions connected with them.—Boston Transcript.

A Hard Won Dinner.

Several days ago five or six sparrows were picking away in the gutter immediately in front of an engine house downtown when a cat crept across the street and pounced upon one of them. Instantly the victim's companions sent up a war cry, which was as instantly answered. From housetop and tree the sparrows flocked to the scene, and with whirring, hissing cries of noisy rage they fearlessly attacked the offender.

For half a minute the dazed cat endured the blows from perhaps half a hundred tiny beaks and twice as many wings. Then, still holding her prey, she struggled away from the infuriated little birds and ran into the engine house. The plucky little fellows followed her inside, but soon gave up the chase, leaving her with her dearly bought dinner a sadder but a wiser cat.—Philadelphia Press.

Patti's Little Ways.

Adeline Patti has a method of dealing with managers which is peculiar to herself. It is said that on one occasion the late J. H. Mapleson was placed in a most difficult position when the gate receipts had not come up to his expectations. Mme. Patti positively refused to don her costume until her fee was given to her, so Mr. Mapleson gave her half the amount due, whereupon the prima donna put on one shoe, but not until the manager had with great effort collected and given Patti all that was due her did she proceed with the dressing and go before her audience.

To my dear friend Jess:

The Old Nursery Rhyme.

One, two, three,

Mother caught a flea.

How she done it

Was a mystery to me,

Till I found out.

It was an easy thing, you know—

She simply got a little powder

From morgan and brehaut.

P. S.—They have all kinds of powder and likwids to destroy man and beast. I will write again soon.

Yours,

ANNIE.

UNDER THE SULTAN.

The Way the Turkish Ruler Removes His Enemies.

Things get done in the sultan's realm, things like the massacre of 1500 in Asiatic Turkey and of 1000 in Macedonia, which come home to the consciousness of every thinking Turk. Take the case of the Kurdish Sheik Jibedillah, who was a guest of the sultan for a time in 1883 and was afterwards sent to Mecca in order that pious occupations might keep him out of mischief. He died very soon after his arrival at Mecca. It was officially announced, although he was the only sufferer from cholera in Mecca that year.

Take the case of Mithad Pasha, the liberal prime minister and the champion of parliamentary government. He was tried for treason in aiding to dethrone Sultan Abdul Aziz and was sent to Taif, near Mecca. After a time he died rather suddenly. By and by a man who had been a soldier in Arabia appeared in Constantinople babbling a tale that ended with "I did not know that it was Mithad Pasha or I would not have put the soap cord about his neck." Of course the police saw that the man was crazy and put him where he was safe from harm.

Take the case of Said Pasha, ex-grand vizier, who fled to the British embassy in Constantinople seven or eight years ago, declaring that he would be killed unless allowed asylum and who could not be induced to leave the building until the ambassador brought him a formal promise of safety sealed with the sultan's own seal. Meditation upon this class of mysteries makes people shake in their shoes every time that they see one of the great army of paid informers who know everything. Men do not say that the sultan does the things which cause this trepidation, but that "the palace" does them. They speak of "the palace" as though it were a sentient but invisible organism, and when they speak of it they look behind them and take out their handkerchiefs and wipe a clammy sweat from their faces.—Henry Thompson in World's Work.
