One of the most ingenious devices for mechanical type-setting that has been evolved by man is the monotype. This machine casts type and at the same time sets it into lines. The type can be used repeatedly just as other type is used over and over again, and for practical purposes is equivalent to type produced by the best foundries. In finish it may not equal type-founders' type, for it is not subjected to close microscopic and other tests, but the face of the letter is deep cut, clear and finely finished. The base of the letter has not the mark left by removal of the kern, but is true, even and firm nevertheless. In a whole galley inverted and standing on its face bottom up, only one false cast was discovered. With proper handling and heating of metal this defect will be removed. The machine is really two machines. One is very like a typewriter. It has 225 keys for letters and others for spacing. A complete computing machine indicates the space required between words and the spacing is thus accurate and absolutely uniform. No power is required for the keyboard. The other machine is all mechanical. It casts the letters and sets them into lines. The size may be the smallest used in newspapers or it may be large advertising display letters. The following paragraph is printed from type set by a Portland firm, who last week installed the first monotype to be used in Oregon.

This paragraph was set on a Lanston Monotype by Schlegel & Moore, commercial type-setters, of Portland, Oregon. The Lanston is a mechanical type-making and setting machine and this machine is the first one to be used in the State of Oregon. It not only sets body or newspaper type but large letters or display type as well. Schlegel & Moore execute work on this new machine to order. Write for prices.

Typesetting machines of various kinds have been in use for a number of years, but the Lanston monotype for the varied purposes for which it is intended ranks first among mechanical contrivances for composition of type.

OREGON FOREVER.

Remarking on the policy of the Lane County Leader relative to its exploitation of the 1905 Exposition, another Oregon paper opines that one would suppose the Fair was to be at Cottage Grove instead of Portland. There is specific allusion, of no uncomplimentary character, as to the method of advertising in vogue with the Leader, and particularly its frequent repetition of the shibboleth "1905—Oregon—1905." Noting this comment, the Leader man makes the following sensible assertion:

"It should be noted by numerous friends of the Leader in other cities that the words '1905—Oregon—1905' do not mean only the Lewis and Clark Exposition. That is only to be an incident in the future years of Oregon. Next year it may be well for all the newspapers of the state to work for '1906—Oregon—1906'."

The Cottage Grove editor has struck the keynote that discloses the prime importance of this entire Exposition movement. First, as to the spirit that is manifest in his method of exploitation—it is the proper one, and worthy of emulation on the part of every paper in the state. Cottage Grove, and every section of the commonwealth, has as direct an interest in the success of the enterprise as if it were a matter of their individual undertaking. As to the quoted comment of the Leader, there should be nothing more pertinent or more worthy of bearing in mind. While the Exposition is essentially the celebration of an event of National character belonging to the past in its more practical bearing it makes for the upbuilding of a rich and populous empire in the future. Its value lies in the demonstrable ability of Oregon not only to fully appreciate the resources and opportunities that lie within her boundaries, but to keep them before the homeseeker and the investing capitalist of the East, in an attractive and convincing manner. The Lane County Leader has a proper conception of the situation when it assumes that the Fair will be but the opening of the campaign that eventually must make Oregon the Empire State of the Pacific Coast. We would amend the Leader's suggestion by simply planting the banner well up the heights, with the determination to create a state sentiment that will rally enthusiastically to the slogan, Oregon forever.—Evening Telegram, Portland, Oct. 18.

In this connection it may be noted that a Cottage Grove man who went to St. Louis as a delegate to two national conventions wore a large button of red fir with the words "Portland, Oregon, 1905." So did his wife. This would be a direct means of advertising the Lewis & Clark fair and Oregon as well.

With reference to the Telegram's statement that "every section of the commonwealth (Oregon), has as direct an interest in the undertaking as if it were a matter of their individual undertaking,"—that is a saying most true.

The Oregon Press Association at Hood River last week resolved unanimously to support and work for the Lewis and Clark Fair. In this effort all newspapers of the State will no doubt assist. The coming year for Oregon will be one most notably for advancing and showing state interests. By this showing every section will be directly benefited. Oregon may aptly be called the Empire State of the West. The great commercial world beyond the Mississippi is only beginning to learn of the vast opportunities here. Two and one-half millions of Eastern money came to lumber interests of the Willamette valley from Michigan last week. Millions more will come next year. All newspapers may well look toward the future and be prepared for a Greater Oregon. By all means let us have "Oregon forever" as a slogan.

Color supplements are becoming essential in the great Sunday papers. On Sunday, October 30th, the Call will begin the issue of a bright up-to-date comic supplement, full of wit and innocent humor. This supplement will be printed in three, and four bright colors and will readily appeal to readers in the many homes on the Pacific Coast to which the Call is a welcome visitor. The Oregonian and Telegram will soon issue color supplements to Saturday and Sunday editions.

The death of Ira L. Campbell of the Eugene Guard is to be deeply regretted. He was the founder of the Eugene Guard and was little past the prime of life. His passing removes one of the indefatigable workers and builders of the State of Oregon, who, by their untiring efforts in the newspapers of this commonwealth, have helped greatly to build a great State. The Leader extends sincerest sympathy to the bereaved family.

A Cottage Grove man was fined $7.50 for disturbing the peace and 24 hours later was married. A facetious judge remarked that if he had been married first and fought afterwards the situation would not have been unusual.

Debate at Springs.

The debate between Mr. More and D. C. Baughman, on the subject of instrumental church music, was pulled off at London according to program: Consisting of four rounds of one hour each, Mr. More in presenting the causes that led up to the discussion, made it necessary on the part of Mr. Baughman, to read some letters written by Mr. More, which in the opinion of the writer placed Mr. More in a rather unenviable position. Good feeling seemed to prevail on the part of the disputants, the poor innocent organ being made the object of uncomplimentary remarks. However the organ remained peaceable and quiet and did not seem to be affected by the discussion, yet it seemed at times, to register a silent protest against so much waste of energy on so unworthy an object as itself.

Will Handle Freight.

Herbert Hawley has accepted a position at the depot in charge of the freight shed. The addition of Mr. Hawley to the force at the depot will prove of great value to local merchants in promptly receiving their shipments and certainly will be appreciated by all the business men of Cottage Grove.

Correspondence

WANTS A MARKET.

Coast Fork, Oct. 12, 1904.
ED. LEADER—Dear Sir: The farmers of this vicinity have a grievance, my share of which is warranted not to rip, ravel or run down at the heel. It is therefore indestructible, unless we use strenuous efforts in the right direction. We as a whole will recognize the necessity of concerted action to protect ourselves some day; and the merchants of Cottage are doing the one thing needful to force things to an issue.

I took a load of potatoes to town Monday. Thereby hangs a tale. The merchants wouldn't pay cash for farm products. The pay offered was trade. The fact that sometimes, even a farmer needs money cut no figure, I must take trade, or keep my potatoes. Hauling them home again was hard on my mules, but some other things the farmer has to contend with would be too much for a mule.

There was a storm Monday night. I had to remain in town. Now for a slight digression. A man and wife did Europe, to be in the swim. On their return the lady was asked, what one thing she enjoyed—more than all else during their trip. She answered, "An earthquake experience we had." Her friends expressed their wonder, naturally, and she explained, that the quake was the only thing that occurred on the trip that her husband did not blame her for (please notice I do not blame the merchants for the storm).

But I will place the blame without fear or favor, and recommend a remedy for present conditions. I made a trip to town during the summer with vegetables; my experience then was the same.

City friends have commented to me the fact that merchants are shipping vegetables, fruit, butter and eggs, and the millers wheat in from abroad, and expressed their surprise. Consumers will know why now; there is no encouragement for their production.

One merchant told me that there was no time when potatoes were worth 1 1/2¢ to the consumer; and he wouldn't pay it. I asked him, if he thought sugar was worth $6.75 and for him to mention one thing in his store that was selling at a loss. His answer was that the farmer could cut sugar out, in case it was too high. Farmers, you can not sell your produce below the cost of producing. How many of you have figured the interest on the money invested in your business, a fair return for your labor, taxes and other incidentals? Do so some time, and see how you are conducting your business. Pay full price for everything you buy, and where necessities are two high take what the Lord sends you or do without.

Let us compare the conditions that obtain in the home life of the merchant (who is making his money from you and others) with yours. Then let your wife and family serve as a constant rebuke, with their lack of every enjoyment, nearly every accomplishment, and get busy with efforts in the right direction.

The remedy for this accumulation of ills, and the conquest of money out of the farmer's hands, is a farmers produce store, and for the farmers to patronize it. Then let the farmers raise fruit of all kinds, vegetables up to the limit, and make the most out of a section of country so favored by nature.

Yours for good times,
H. S. WEBBER.

[The ideas expressed by this correspondent indicate a need for action by merchants and by the Commercial Club to create a market for fruit, vegetables, butter and other products from the farm. This can be done in the stores now established or by creating a free market. A vacant lot and a shed are all that are necessary for a free market. On the other hand farmers who bring butter in hard pails, peaches and apples in sacks and vegetables in straw on the bottom of their wagons must expect to be refused a buyer as long as their goods are not in marketable form. The potatoes referred to by Mr. Webber were no doubt in sacks but in the case of other produce, little care as to boxing crating or wrapping is exercised.—Ed. Leader.]

Bright's Disease and Diabetes.

We desire to place in the hands of those afflicted with Bright's Disease and Diabetes a 32-page pamphlet that is saving human lives. It is not an ordinary pamphlet, such as is commonly used to advertise medicines, but is principally made up of reports of scientifically conducted tests in a large variety of cases, showing 87 per cent of recoveries in these hitherto incurable diseases.

The specifics employed in these tests are known as the Fulton Compounds and the results obtained prove conclusively that these dreaded diseases so long fatal (the deaths from Bright's Disease alone are appalling, over 100,000 a year, starting as kidney troubles) have at last yielded to medical science. The pamphlet is free. Write to the John J. Fulton Co., 409 Washington street, San Francisco, Cal.

When to suspect Bright's Disease—Puffy ankles or hands; weakness without apparent cause; kidney trouble after third month, frequent urination, (may show sediment or cloudy on standing); falling vision; day drowsiness—one or more of these.
