T. R. Parker has fitted up in a cosy manner the rooms over his bakery for his family. The wall paper decorations of his parlor is a work of art and something different from the ordinary. The side walls are covered with rectangular samples of wall paper about 12x16 inches, of all colors and patterns, no two pieces being alike. The ceiling border is about 3 feet wide and is made up of small bits of paper put on one at a time and has the effect of a piece of crazy patchwork. The whole effect is most striking and unique and Mr. Parker may well be proud of his accomplishment.
