A Clear-Cut Warning.

"Young ladies," said an absent-minded teacher to his class in Virgil, "I understand that you count upon my calling you in alphabetical order, and prepare your lessons accordingly. I am surprised an disappointed at such conduct. Hereafter, I warn you, I shall begin at the other end of the alphabet."

Not for Him.

"I don't see the sense in paying $50 for a panama hat."
"No, of course not; you're not a politician."
"What has that to do with it?"
"Well, the weave of a genuine panama is so exceedingly close it would be almost impossible to talk through it."
—Philadelphia Press.

Between Friends.

Ida—Listen to Erma reciting the "Wreck of the Hesperus." How terrible it must have been!
Mabel—Yes, and some people can make it more terrible than it was.
—Chicago News.

Corrected.

Visitor—Go to the proprietor and tell him to make out my bill properly and write omelette with two t's and not one. Waiter (a few minutes later)—It's all right now, sir; omelet, 1 shilling; two teas, 2 shillings.

Love Tried and True.

"There goes a couple that have been friends since childhood, and grow fonder and fonder of each other."

"Are they engaged?"
"Engaged! They're married and divorced!"

Mothers will find Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup the best remedy to use for their children during the teething period.

Familiar with Sharks.

"Did you see any sharks when you crossed the ocean, Mr. Spikins?" asked Miss Purling.

"Yes, I played cards with a couple."

Oysters.

If you want to try a can of the finest, largest, plumpest and most delicious canned oysters you ever saw, ask your grocer to send you a can of Monopole. There is only one packer in the United States who puts up as fine goods as Monopole and therefore they are not to be had under any other brand. Under the Monopole brand we also have packed a full line of canned fruits and vegetables, spices, coffee, baking powder and the like. They are packed under a beautifully embossed blue and gold label. The label is fine, but the goods are finer. Your grocer handles them or can get them for you. See that he does it. Wadhams Kerr Bros., Packers, Portland, Oregon.

Later Returns.

Upgraden—What are you looking so glum about? You told me the other day that you had thrown all your cares to the winds.
Atom—So I had. But the wind changed and brought them back.
—Chicago Tribune.

Blind Letter Carrier.

Arnold Scott, of Barnardboro, Mass., who has been blind for 50 years has served the town as letter carrier and is said to be particularly efficient in both the collecting and delivering of mail.

Nothing to Brag Of.

"Yes, Puffup asserts that he has always been accustomed to riding in a carriage. I suppose he started life that way?"

"Humph! Most of us did!"
—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

The Cook Objected.

Blobbs—Why was the engagement between Hardup and Miss Gotrox broken off?
Slobbs—Her father's cook objected to any further additions to the family.
—Philadelphia Record.

His Favorite Kind.

Rimer—And who is your favorite poet, Mr. Kostique?
Kostique—Chatterton.
Rimer—Huh! What do you find to admire in him?
Kostique—He committed suicide.
—Philadelphia Record.

Colds

"I had a terrible cold and could hardly breathe. I then tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and it gave me immediate relief."
W. C. Layton, Sidell, Ill.

How will your cough be tonight? Worse, probably. For it's first a cold, then a cough, then bronchitis or pneumonia, and at last consumption. Coughs always tend downward. Stop this downward tendency by taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

Three sizes: 25c., 50c., $1. All druggists.

Consult your doctor. If he says take it, then do as he says. If he tells you not to take it, then don't take it. He knows. Leave it with him. We are willing.

Getting Acquainted

"I remember," said the old inhabitant, "when a merry-go-round was a wonderful novelty, a remarkable sight, in our village."

Here he nods his head wisely and continues:
"But, now we have grown familiar with them, we call them molly go rounds."
—Baltimore American.

Nothing Wasted.

A Scottish farmer, when going to market, it was observed, always took a hen with him in his trap. The reason was never known until one day he took a friend with him for the drive. Every place the farmer stopped he put the nosebag on his horse, and the hen was so trained that what dropped from the bag she would pick up, so there was nothing wasted.

Feminine Baseball Fan.

"I see you attend nearly every game. Do you understand it thoroughly?"
"No," replied the pretty girl in the white duck suit. "I hate the game—but that pitcher's mighty handsome."

Seeing is Believing.

"Do you know anything about hypnotism?" asked the girl in the pink silk waist.

"Well," replied the fluffy-haired maid as she held up her left hand to display a sparkling solitaire to better advantage, "you can judge for yourself."

WHERE GREELEY WAS A PUPIL

Old School House Where the Great Editor Studied.

In the town of Bennington, N. H., near the southern line, there stands an old building in which the illustrious Horace Greeley once attended school. This ancient institution of learning stands in a lone pasture, and surrounded by grazing sheep and inhabited now by bats and owls, it still retains a halo of respect from those who are acquainted with its history. The building is more than a hundred years old, and though the outside has fallen in in many places the frame will probably stand for many years more.

The single apartment is lathed and plastered, overhead the walls are sheathed with very wide pine boards with strips of cloth pasted over the cracks, and the whole papered with newspapers. Some of these papers were found bearing dates as early as 1861, and underneath these others yellowed with age and past deciphering. Two small windows, one on each side of the room, furnish the only light, and a door leading into the narrow entry, the exit. The huge fireplace has been removed.

One who attended school and afterward taught in this schoolhouse, many years ago, thus described its construction and the methods employed when young Horace attended the school, and for many years after that date:

"On three sides of the room, and close against the wall, was a low, slanting shelf, which served as a desk for those who wrote. The seats were made of slabs inverted, and without backs. The older pupils sat along the sides of the room, the girls on one side and the boys on the other. The youngest sat nearest the fire, where they were as much too warm as those who sat nearest the door were too cold. In this little room there would assemble during the winter term forty or fifty pupils. Of this number, one-fourth perhaps would be grown-up, marriageable young men and women, and frequently married men and women attended the school in the winter term.

"The teacher was, perhaps, one of the farmer's sons in the district or a student, working his way through college. The qualification necessary for him to secure a school and "keep it" was the ability to do any sum in arithmetic; his compensation was $10 or $12 per month and board. The last part of the contract he obtained by "boarding around," that is, he lived a few days in each family in the district, the length of time in each place being in proportion to the number of pupils.

"During the winter of 1821-2 young Horace attended this school. He lived with his uncle, Benjamin Robinson, who owned a farm on the bank of the Contoocook river, a mile and a half from the schoolhouse. This uncle also owned a saw and grist mill. Of these buildings those that were not carried away by freshets have fallen to decay and disappeared, so there remain only a cellar hole and a few trees, which surrounded the house, to mark the spot where once stood a happy home and a business enterprise."

DESIGN FOR A HOTEL AT THE ST. LOUIS WORLD'S FAIR.

In anticipation of the coming Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St. Louis a large number of big hotel projects have been launched. One of the most pretentious of the proposed buildings is the design shown above. It will occupy a prominent corner and be unusually ornate for this class of structure. The plans call for a 14-story building, the cost, it is said, to approximate $1,000,000.

A store will do business in an old room for years, but if the store moves out, and a saloon moves in, the room is handsomely refurnished.
