

Married.

BENNETT-SCHLEE—At Tacoma, Wash., on Thanksgiving evening, Mr O E Bennett, of Bremerton, Wash., and Miss Mand Schlee, of Cottage Grove, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. Rev Harry Hudson, of St Paul Episcopal Church officiating.

The groom is a member of the Washington Marine Band, located at Bremerton Wash., where in a short time the happy couple expect to make their home. The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr and Mrs Joseph Schlee, of this city, and one of Cottage Grove's most accomplished and popular young ladies, and at present is taking a course in stenography and typewriting at the Puget Sound Business College, of Tacoma, where she will remain until the course is completed. The wedding day was appropriately celebrated by the happy pair and a few selected friends in feasting and merry-making in the spacious dining room and parlors tastily decorated for the occasion and a number of elegant presents were received from the bride's parents and relatives of this city. The LEADER joins a host of Miss Mand's friends in wishing the happy couple "bon voyage."

WORRIES WHICH WOMEN MAKE FOR THEMSELVES.

There are women in the world who, if they spent their lives contriving how to wear out patience of their husbands, could do it to no better advantage. If they ever read the never-taken-to-heart that verse in Proverbs which tells how the wise woman buildeth her house, but the foolish plucketh it down with her hands. The moment they open their eyes in the morning they begin to complain or something, and the last breath at night is spent in some vain regret. At breakfast they make it unsafe to speak, as any remark is sure to be contorted into offense; they think that the husband need not spend the little he is at the table over the newspaper and say so; they are distressed by the service, disgusted by the dishes, vexed by the children, and fill the hour so entirely with restless nagging that when the door closes behind him the husband is justified if he feels himself escaping into free air and breaking loose from his bonds.

That husband is unlikely to return at luncheon, even if his home is within reasonable distance—freedom is too pleasant to be lightly thrown away, peace is to precious. He knows, if he does, that this entertainment would be an account of headache or some other ache, for which in some dim way he seems to blame, of the short comings of servants, the misdoings of children, the unkindness of the neighbors, the depravity of things in general. And that women wonders why her husband never comes home till every other place is closed.

Probably when this man does go home at the late dinner hour it is because it is needs must with him. He would like to love his home, to enjoy his children, to comfort his wife; but it is difficult to love that which is unlovable, to enjoy that in which you meet perpetual hindrance, or to give comfort when the springs of comfort have been exhausted by long use and waste. He is of the men who think marriage a mistake.
