

Golden Grains.

—Patient waiting is often the highest way of doing God's will.—Collier.

—Old truths are always made fresh to us by coming in on the experimental side.

—The death-hour is a high point of observation, from which one obtains a clear view of both worlds.

—There is no real life but cheerful life; therefore valetudinarians should be sworn, before they enter into company not to say a word of themselves till the meeting breaks up.—Addison.

—Longing desire prayeth always, though the tongue be silent. If thou art ever longing, thou art ever praying. When sleepeth prayer? When desire-grows cold.—Augustine.

—That was a suggestive remark of Bishop Thirlwall, who was very deaf, when he had some difficulty, and after several repetitions, caught some cursory remark about the weather, "Strange, how little one loses by being deaf!"

—The records of every Christian life, if written by men who could see, as the inspired writers did, the hand of God in human affairs, would show as marked and remarkable interpositions of Providence as those of the Bible.

—The word "character" comes from a term which means to engrave upon or to cut in. Character is that inner, substantial, and essential quality which is wrought into the soul, and makes a man what he actually is.

—For a few brief days the orchards are white with blossoms. They soon turn to fruit, or else float away, useless and wasted, upon the idle breeze. So will it be with present feelings. They must be deepened into decision or be entirely dissipated by delay.—T. L. Cuyler.

—Worship is man's highest employment. It comprehends adoration, prayer, supplication, praise, thanksgiving and solemn humiliation before the Most High, as well as the devotion of our substance to such ends as God appoints, and the consecration of all we are to have to his service.

—There are two little words in our language which I always admire—Try and Trust. You know not what you can or cannot effect until you try; and if you make your trial in the exercise of trust in God, mountains of imaginary difficulties will vanish as we approach them, and facilities will be afforded which you never anticipated.—Samuel Smiles.
