An active and faithful memory doubles life; for it brings a man upon its stage with all those who have made their exits.
-A truly good man had iather be deceived than be suspicious, ond rather forego his own right than run the venture of deing even a hard thing.
-Law is like a sieve; you may see through it, but you must be considerably reduced before you can get through it.
-Precept is instruction written in the sand-the tide flows over it and the record is gone. Example, if engraven on the rock, the lesson is not soon lost.

Every man ought to act and speak with such jntegrity that no one would bave occasion to doubt his stimple affirmation.
-The virtue of prosperity is temperance; the virtue of adversity fortitude, which, in morals, is the more heroic virtue.
-Give even an angel a bad name, and the simplest of us can see the evil expression in his face whetber it is there or not.
-Gonscience is a coward, and those ${ }^{\text {f }}$ faults it has not strength enough to prevent it seldom has justice enough to accuse.
-The Scriptures are wonderful with respect to the matter which they contain, the manner in which thEy are written, and the effect $hich ithey produce.-Home.
-The stuff that martyrs are made of is to be found in many an humble and yet unnoted child of God; and only the occasion is needed to bring this fact to light.
-Don't live your life alone, without forming friendships and love; your nature needs love, you were made for it, and other natares need you. You are robbing yourself, you are robbing others, if you live like a hermit. Therefore, go out into God's world and live your life out for others.
-If you would persevere, set often before your eyes the noble examples of those who have persevered in religion. What a glorioure army of saints and martyrs lave gone before us! How contitant to the death was Paul! How persevering in the faith were Ignatius, Polycarp, Athanasius ! These were stars in their orb, pillars in the temple of God. Let us look on their zeal and courage, and be animated. Seeing we are compassed sbout with so great a cloud of witpesses, flet uis run with patience.
