

Wise and Otherwise.

—“Laziness travels so slowly that poverty soon overtakes her.”

—Learn to say No! and it will be of more use to you than to be able to read Latin.—Spurgeon.

—A true and faithful friend is a living treasure, a comfort in solitude, and a sanctuary in distress.

—No man is a gentleman who, without provocation, would insult the humblest of his species.

—In the way of thanks—Young lady (writing a love letter for the kitchen maid): “That’s about enough now, isn’t it?” Kitchen maid: “One thing more, Miss: please say excuse bad spellin’ and writin’.”

—Let us never measure the worth of a man, be he ever so chilly, by his conduct toward us. How many rich souls are lost to us through pride?

—“Insults,” says a modern philosopher, “are like counterfeit money. We can not prevent their being offered, but we are not obliged to take them.”

—In the minds of the best of men there is, always has been, and always will be, some difference of opinion as to what is true: but everybody knows and feels what is kind.

—If a man is determined to do the very best he can, whether he drives a cart, conducts the business of a million dollars, or preaches the Gospel, he cannot fail.

—“What your daughter wants,” said an over-candid music teacher to a millionaire whose education was not equal to his fortune, “is capacity.” “Indeed!” was the astonished reply. “Well, then, I’ll order one immediately, no matter what it costs.”

—What is death to the man of God? Death is but the entrance into the city of God. It is but joining a more blessed company and singing a more exalted strain than he can do in this world.—Cecil.

—In your temptations go to the promises. They are branches the Lord has hung over the water, that his half-drowned children may take a grip of them, without which they will go to the bottom.

—The grand old Book of God still stands; and this old earth, the more its leaves are turned over and pondered, the more it will sustain and illustrate the Sacred Word.—Dana.
