Flight: Veteran whisked around memorials in D.C.

"They gave up their lives to go fight for our country — some of them truly gave up their lives — but they gave up their plans to go fight," Dixon added.

Lonigan, 93, who was the navigator on a B-24 bomber crew in 1944 and 1945, still insists he is not a hero.

"No way, the guys down on the ground (were)," he said.

Honor Flight of Oregon sees all the World War II vets it takes to the memorial in a different light, organizing dinners, airport welcomes, and police escorts while in Washington, D.C., to give them the credit they earned so many decades ago.

"It was just so fun to have them get that kind of treatment, from the police escort to the response of the people, overwhelming," Dixon said of the trip spanning May 28-31.

Once in D.C., the group of 26 vets and their guardians were taken to the memorials for World War II, Vietnam War, Korean War, Lincoln, U.S. Navy, Iwo Jima, and U.S. Air Force. They also made stops at Arlington National Cemetery to see the changing of the guard at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum.

All of those visits were crammed into two days, but Honor Flight made sure they were whisked from one location to another as quickly as possible.

"They gave us a police escort, so we just went from place to place with no trouble," Dixon said. "The sirens would go off and we went through red lights. ... It was pretty exciting."

For the patriotic Lonigan, the trip was the fulfillment of a long-held wish.

"It was something I had looked forward to, but didn't know whether I would ever make it," he said.

He said among the highlights of the trip was seeing the World War II and Korean War memorials, and the changing of the guard at Arlington.

"There's no words to describe that," he said.

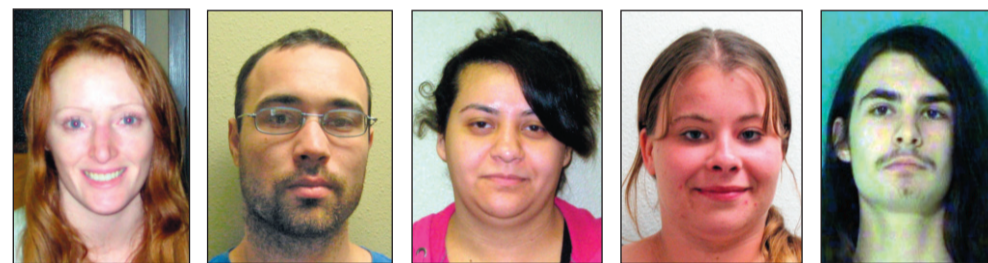

Dixon said she's heard her father's stories about the war many times — particularly the time he and his crew had to bail out of their plane, the Lucky Penny, while on a bombing mission. They all survived the dramatic incident, except for the B-24, which crashed and exploded on impact.

She said going on the trip with her father allowed her to connect in a small way with his experience.

"To go and see him honored like this was a special thing to do together," she said.

Upon its return to Portland, the group was given one last hero's welcome at Portland International Airport. Even National Women's Soccer League team Portland Thorns took part, posing for photos with the guys after a return trip from a game.

"It was exhausting," Dixon said of the whirlwind trip, "but it was incredible."

Kyle Parkin indicted in death of infant daughter

Itemizer-Observer staff report

INDEPENDENCE — Kyle Parkin, 36, of Independence was arrested on June 3 in connection to the death of his 2-month-old daughter.

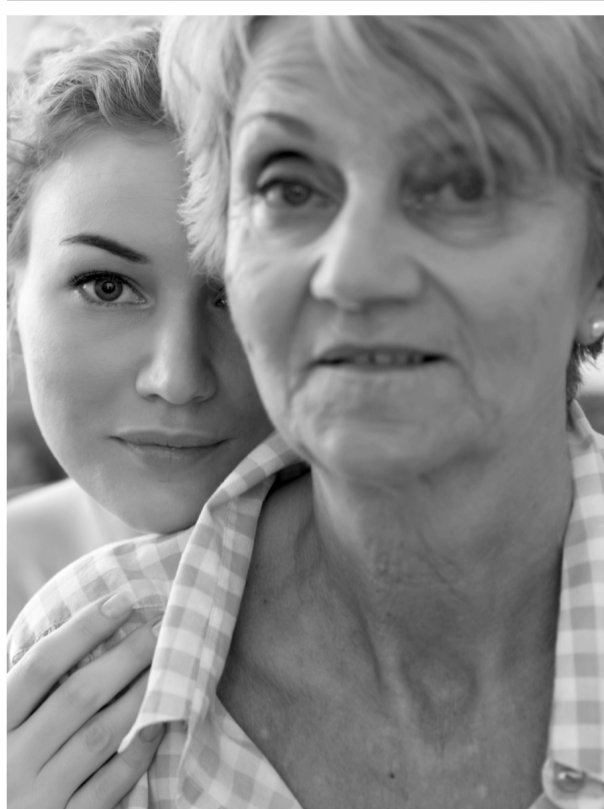

Parkin was indicted by a grand jury on May 27 for second-degree manslaughter and second-degree criminally negligent homicide.

On Feb. 6, Independence Police and medics from Polk County Fire District No. 1 responded to a call of an infant not breathing. Parkin allegedly put a pacifier in her mouth because she was fussy, and laid her on her stomach next to him and went back to sleep, according to police reports.

When he woke up, his daughter would not wake up. Medics could not revive her using CPR.

Mom has always been so patient, but now when I ask her questions she gets angry.

IT'S NOT LIKE HER.
