KINDNESS THAT PAYS.

The Proper Way of Getting Horses from the Pasture Field.

It would no doubt be a very amusing scene were it possible to take a bird'seye view of some of the busiest farming districts one of these fine mornings about daylight, and see the different ways of getting horses up out of the pasture and into the stables ready for work. The pleading echoes of the "hoap! hoap! ho-ap!" from one farm would be answered by the savage bark of the dog on another farm as he chased the poor animals as if they were so many wild beasts that were being drove out of the neighborhood. Getting up the horses on some farms is regarded as one of the hardest tasks of the day, and it is frequently made one of the most wearisome performances both for the horses and those who attend to it. It comes at a time when neither man nor beast can afford to get excited or worried, for the whole day's work is still before them, and with a bad start there is liable to be trouble and worry all the day. This may seem to be a matter of little importance but there is more in it than is generally supposed. Horses which are brought quietly from the field will eat their morning feed of grain with a better relish and get more food from it than if chased around at full speed for a half-hour before he can be captured. The excitement caused by this chasing is more exhausting than the hardest kind of labor, to say nothing about the time lost in doing it. If treated properly horses will not be hard to get up in the morning or any other time. Treat them kindly when they come in, and they will soon learn to come without coaxing or driving. Have a treat in the shape of a good feed of grain or chop that they will relish when the get into the stable, and all you will have to do is to open the gates and doors and let them to it. If they have acquired the habit of running, and are hand to drive, it will take some more tempting than usual to break off this habit. Have their feed in the trough for them when they enter the stable, and they will learn to hurry to it instead of running in the opposite direction. It may take a little time and some patience to break old offenders, but it can be done, and when once accomplished the pleasure it will afford and the time saved will more than repayo for the trouble. If you treat and train your horses right they wAl be awaiting your appearance at the accustomed time instead of skulking away and trying to avoid you .- National Stockman.

Jay Gould's Wardrobe.

Mr. Gould considers his time more valuable than monoy, and it is his habit to visit his tailor and tell him to make so many suits of clothes. "I guess you'd better make me about four suits of clothes this time," Mr. Gould would sny. Then he will stroke his whiskers, look thoughtful and add: "Possibly you'd better make me half a dozen suits this time; have them done as soon as you can, and if they don't prove what I like I will give them to my brother." Mr. Gould leaves every thing to his tailor's judgment: that person also selects Mr. Gould's neckties and underwear. The millionaire says himself that he hasn't time to bother with such small details. His tailor explained to me that Mr. Gould's brother. whom he had referred to, is rather an arratic individual. He is the opposite of his brother Jay, for he cares nothing for money, neither does he know how to make it. The millionaire seldom trusts him with very much money, but he has carte blanche to go to any of his brother's tradespeople and get whatever he may need. He's exactly the same size as his brother, and a suit of clothes that fits one is equally suitable for the other. Sometimes when Mr. Gould orders a half dozen suits of clothes, and they are sent home to him, there may not be one, suit that he likes, and he immediately gives an order for another half-dozen suits. He does not even think. to ask the price, and finds no faultiwith his tailor. His tailor says there-are few men in New York that dress better than Mr. Gould. - Washing . ton Star.

A WONDERFUL MULE. Though Made of Brass He Is Supposed to

Cure Every Disease. A friend, recently oreturned from Pekin, tells us that he saw semethod of cure which may be new to some of our readers. In a temple outside one of the city gates is to be found a brass mule of life size supposed to have wonderful healing properties. Patients suffering from every imaginable disease seek this temple to obtain a cure. The method pursued is as follows: Supposing you suffer from sciatica, you go with all speed to this famous temple, and having discovered the par-tifully cleaned by using whiting in the water. ticular part of the brass mule corresponding to the painful region of your own body, you first rub the animal a certain number of times, and then with the same hand shampoo your own disabled member, and then-well, then the pain goes. The special feature of this method of cure is its delightful simplicity. Is your tooth aching?just scrub the mule's teeth and afterward your own, and voila! the cure is complete. Have you an ulcer of the cornea? pass the tips of your fingers to and fro over the particular eyeball of the mule, and then, with well-regulated pressure, rab repeatedly the afflicted eye. But we are forgetting; the mule has unhappily lost his sight during the many years he has been engaged in his benevolent work-the eyeballs, we are told, having been gradually worn away as the result of constant friction. until now you have only the empty orbits to operate upon.' Yet don't be distressed, dear reader, the success is guaranteed to be as real as it was formerly. Is the cure always certain? some would-be applicant may inquire. Well, the temple is covered with laudatory tablets in honor of the mule. Isn't this testimony enough? and if you want more the animal is patched in all directions with fresh pieces of brass, put on to cover holes produced by the constant friction of eager patients; and a new perfectly whole mule stands ready at hand, awaiting the day when his old colleague, having fallen to piecies, shall give him an opportunity of likewise beliefitting posterity. -Husband (to wife, home from church)--"Service interesting this morning, my dear?" -Af a recent meeting of the Academy of Sciences, in Paris, M. Chevreul communicated, in the name of M. Arnaud, Curator at the Museum of Natural History, a very interesting note on the toxic substance which the Comalis employ to poison their arrows. This substance is the "Ouabajo" wood, and from this wood M. Arnaud has extrasted a crystalline matter endowed with terrible venomous properties. In subcutaneous and intravenous injections three one-hundredths of a grain of the poison suffices to kill a dog. Death rapidly occurs by an arrest of the heart's action.
