A PIONEER PHYSICIAN

Brief Sketch of the Life and Character of Dr. James Whitton Boyle.

DALLAS, Or., July 18.—(To the Editor.)—The mention of the name of Dr. James W. Boyle will awaken the memories of more people in Polk and adjoining counties than that of any other man who has ever followed the healing art within the same field of labor.

Dr. Boyle was born in Tazewell county, Virginia, April 15, 1815. He began the practice of medicine in Indiana when only 18 years old, before taking a collegiate course. He went from Indiana to St. Louis, Missouri, and took two courses of medical lectures in Kemper College. After graduating in the Spring of 1844, he moved to Fairfield, Iowa, where he followed his profession until 1845. He then came direct to Oregon and established himself in Polk county near where the town of Rickreall is now located.

When he began to practice medicine in this county he had nothing with which to begin business but his talent and honor, having spent his earnings in mastering his profession and in making his journey across the plains to Oregon with a slow-plodding ox team. Soon after arriving in Oregon, Doctor Boyle married a most charming and estimable young woman, Miss Josephine Pauline Ford, a daughter of Col. Nathaniel Ford. The Doctor was not like most of our young Doctors of today who justify themselves in not marrying by saying that they cannot afford it. He thought it was a very poor country where two couldn't make a better living than one, so on May 12, 1848, the bond of union was consummated that resulted in establishing what is known in Polk county as the Boyle family.

Dr. Boyle first selected his donation claim on what is known as the old Whiteaker place. He built his cabin near the spot where a company is now boring for oil. He sold this claim before filing and located his permanent donation claim on the north side of the LaCreole, a mile above Rickreall. He also purchased 320 acres adjoining his donation claim, which gave him 960 acres of fertile valley land. He lived in his log cabin for many years, using it for a residence and office. In the early '60s, he built a large frame house, which stands today as a monument to his thrift and enterprise.

The Doctor was an industrious man. He rode day and night, far and near, rain or shine, through dust and mud, over valley, hill and mountain. His field of practice embraced at one time all the territory from East Chehalen, North Yamhill and Grand Ronde valley to Blodgett's valley in Benton county; to Spring Valley, and over into the Waldo Hills. There seemed to be no limit to his physical endurance.

He had wonderful perspective powers; could discern readily, diagnose his cases and render a correct prognosis. He was an all-round practitioner; could pull a tooth or amputate a thigh at any time when necessary. He was very successful in every department of his profession. This accounts for his popularity. He was philanthropic, and attended rich and poor alike. He always kept good horses; was fond of them, and took good care of them. Often coming home late at night, himself and horse muddy and cold, he would wash, dry and bed his animal before going to his own bed.

In 1858 he opened in Dallas the first drugstore in Polk county—the store now owned and managed by Belt & Cherrington. He was of Scotch and Irish descent, very aggressive and progressive, and always on the advance—which qualities he demonstrated by withdrawing from his large field of practice and taking a course of lectures in Cooper College, in San Francisco, in 1863 and 1864, in order to be abreast of the times in his profession. If he had any spare moments at home, he would haul wood or do any farm work. He would even cook the meals if his wife was sick, and often assisted her in doing other household—something very unusual in the medical profession.

Dr. Boyle was a domesticated man, and loved his wife and children. He was tender-hearted, and was often seen shedding tears in common with those suffering from bereavement. His motto was "Cheers for the living, and tears for the dead." In order to give his children better facilities for acquiring an education, he bought property in Salem and moved there in 1860. He died in July, 1864, at the age of 49 years, from internal injuries received in a runaway accident.

He now reposes beneath the sod in the cemetery south of Salem. His name and deeds are written upon the tablets of memory of hundreds of men and women who have been the recipients of his professional skill.

Oregon Boys Win Distinction.

Among the seaside visitors to pass through Corvallis Thursday, was Hon. Stephen F. Chadwick, judge of the superior court at Colfax, Washington. He is the son of the late Governor S. F. Chadwick, and is an Oregon boy who has gone abroad and won distinction. His term of four years as judge is expiring, and during his sojourn at Newport, Judge Chadwick received intelligence that the republican convention had adjourned without making a nomination for a successor for him, in consequence of which he will have no opposition for the place. Five Oregon boys are judges in Washington, two of them being justices of the supreme court.—Corvallis Times.

Oregon has a statute, probably unfamiliar to many of its citizens, which provides for the taking of a state census once in every ten years. The next enumeration, under this statute falls in 1905. It is the duty of the county assessors all over the state to compile the census of their respective counties and to report the results to the secretary of state.

FINE TESTIMONIAL

Mohair Experts Pronounce U. S. Grant's Mohair Equal to Best Turkish Product.

BOSTON, Mass., July 8, 1904.

Mr. U. S. Grant, Dallas, Oregon.

Dear Sir:—The mohair you shipped us was baled just as it ought to be. It would pay other shippers to take lessons from you in baling. It is for the seller's advantage to make the best possible first impression on the buyer and that is one of the results of correct baling.

Regarding the quality of your mohair, it was well grown, pliable and free from kemp. Our sorters sorted it carefully just on the basis on which they sort Turkey mohair, and the corresponding sorts were fully as good as we expect from the best Turkey mohair. With such good stock to start with, we think it would be for your interest to breed for fineness of fibre, for a good proportion of fine mohair raises the value of the fleece largely. We are paying you 40 cents for your mohair, and it is easily worth that price. It is much better than most of the American mohair, and if you keep on with intelligence and care you ought to be able to improve the quality so that your mohair would bring any year at least 50 cents per pound. What you have already accomplished ought to be a stimulus to other growers, and we wish they would take such advice as evidently you must know how to give. We like to encourage growers of such mohair, and congratulate you.

Respectfully yours,
Massachusetts Mohair Plush Co.

Another Oregon Industry.

The paper mill company started up their new paper-making machinery last Saturday, and are now making paper out of wood pulp. This doubles the output of the mill, and doubles the number of their employes. They will continue to use their old machinery for the manufacture of straw paper. The wood pulp paper is a splendid quality of wrapping paper, lighter in color and a finer grade than straw paper.—Lebanon Express-Advance.

Planter, the famous Hambletonian stallion owned by Gifford Zumwalt, died at Black's livery stable in this city, Sunday morning. He was one of the finest bred horses in Oregon, and was a full brother to Prodigal, the late Marcus Daly's celebrated trotting stallion. Planter was brought to Oregon from Kentucky by the late Congressman Thomas H. Tongue, and was 22 years old at the time of his death.

Attorney-General Crawford holds in an opinion rendered Monday that applicants for second and third-grade teachers' certificates are not entitled to have credit for standing secured by them in any branch if they fail to pass the examination. The provision that where a teacher has, in two successive examinations, received 90 per cent in one or more branches, the applicant may at the next examination be credited with the standing earned applies only to first-grade certificates.

The high prices for chitten bark last year have caused a great many Lane county people to go into the bark business, with the result that the market is already so well supplied that the price is down to 5 cents, with prospects of going lower. Lane has plenty of the bark, but there is not much money in it at 5 cents, especially where it is hard to get at in the mountains, and must be hauled a long distance to trade centers.—Eugene Register.

In point of literacy, Oregon stands third among the states of the Union. This fact should be called to the attention of some of the immigrants and visitors from the eastern states, those that consider themselves thrust out upon a wild frontier when they step off the train in Oregon. Oregon has plenty of wildness in its composition but it is confined to the scenery and physical conditions and does not extend to the people who are tame and have their percentage of culture.—Grant's Pass Courier.

The Careful Composer.

Imagine if you can the feelings of the editorial writer on the Portland Journal when he picked up his paper and found a carefully-selected quotation printed like this:

"Seattle was chiefly made what it is by men who took chances, who had faith, who had—

The sublime audacity of youth.

That unto the distant mountain saith.

'Be thou removed, 'an' t' dingsh'rldu- emfwyphshrluon.

'Be thou removed, and it is done."

If the editor didn't "remove" that hiotyper, he didn't do his duty.

BEGAN WORK MONDAY

Judge Galloway Held His First Term of Court in Linn County.

Judge William Galloway, the successful democratic candidate for circuit judge for the Third judicial district, opened his work as a circuit judge at Albany on Monday.

There are few cases on the docket here and the Judge will get them cleared off as soon as possible, as he will be busy for a while on account of Judge Burnett taking a vacation, and Judge Galloway will have to look out for his department while he is away. Judge Galloway has been all over the district with his colleague since the election, and has informed himself thoroughly on his duties so that it is expected he will take to the work like an old stager.—Albany Herald.
