Entertained Large Audience. The people of Dallas enjoyed a delightful hour of song and story at the M. E. Church last Friday evening, it being the occasion of Miss Elizabeth M. Pollock's elocutionary recital. The program was an excellent one, and the large audience was more than pleased with the entertainment. Miss Pollock is an elocutionist and impersonator of rare ability, and presents a wide range of work. She is graceful and natural in her readings, and holds her audience spellbound by her character portrayal and expression. It would be hard to say that one number on the program was better than another—they were all good. Miss Pollock was assisted by Miss Hallie Morrison, Miss Irma Smith, Prof. H. H. Dunkelberger and Carl Williams, who gave some excellent vocal solos and duets. The entertainment was financially successful and will net a neat sum for the treasury of the Epworth League, under whose auspices the recital was given.

INSIDE INFORMATION

A Quiet Tip to Persons Seeking Hotel Accommodations at the Big Fairs. At the World's Fair, St. Louis, the hotel within the grounds is called the Inside Inn. The capitalists who built this famous hostelry will probably erect a similar building on the Lewis and Clark fair grounds at Portland. An Eastern exchange tells of a visitor to the St. Louis Fair, (probably Judge Sibley or "Uncle" John Castle) who timidly walked up to the desk and asked: "Is this the Inside Inn? And if so, is the proprietor of the Inside Inn in?" "Yes," replied the smart clerk, with a far away look in his eyes, "this is the Inside Inn, and you will find the proprietor outside by the Inn's side. He has been keeping the Inn for several weeks. He tells me that once when he took an ocean voyage he couldn't keep his inside in, but that was inside information, and he didn't intend to get it outside." "Alright," said the guest, "if this is the Inside Inn, we want to see its inside as well as its outside before we look inside any of the outside inns. If we like the Inside Inn's inside and outside better than we like the outside inn's outside and inside, we may bring our things from outside inside and stop inside the Inside Inn, because we won't have to go from the inside outside or come back from the outside inside when we're seeing the Fair, but can remain inside or outside the Inside Inn, it being the only inn inside the grounds. The other inns are on the outside and furnish no more comforts for the guests inside or outside than does the Inside Inn with the exhibits close outside the Inn's side—that is the Inside Inn's side. In—"

But the clerk had fainted and fallen inside the Inside Inn's desk, and bell boys were hurrying with water for his outside and brandy for his inside, but in their excitement they got that which was meant for his inside outside and that which was for his outside inside."

OREGON TOWNS ARE GROWING H. V. Gates Tells What He Saw While on Tour of State. "Portland people little realize how the state at large is growing in population," said H. V. Gates, of Hillsboro, who is in Portland today. Mr. Gates owns electric light and water plants at Heppner, Prineville, Klamath Falls, Elgin and Dallas and his business keeps him on the move throughout the state all the time. "I see houses going up by the score everywhere," he said, "and I should judge that the smaller cities of the state have grown fully one-third in population within the past year. Even a little town like Dallas, in Polk County, has a hundred new houses. This means a housing capacity of 400 persons added to Dallas, which had a population a year ago of 1500. The new houses are filled with occupants as fast as they are finished, and other new foundations are laid. "There is growth, growth, everywhere. In Eastern Oregon new farms are being cultivated on what have heretofore been sheep ranges, and the sheep are daily being restricted to closer quarters. Lands that were formerly considered 'scab' and worthless, except for grazing, are producing good crops under improved systems of cultivation, and the farmers are all prosperous."—Evening Telegram.
