The teachers of Polk county are taking an active interest in the preparation of a fine school exhibit for the Lewis and Clark Fair. A meeting to discuss plans for the work was held in Dallas last Saturday, and was attended by about sixty teachers. The Oregon State Normal School and Dallas College will assist in the work, and no effort will be spared to make the showing of the Polk county schools the banner educational exhibit of the state.

Wesley Vaughn, senior partner of the hardware firm of Vaughn & Weaver, arrived home Monday evening from a month's visit to his old home in Iowa. The weather was extremely cold during his stay in his native state, and he is glad to get back to the sunshine and green fields of the Willamette Valley. He says the Lewis and Clark Fair is well advertised throughout the Eastern States, and all eyes are upon Oregon. Every line of printed information concerning the state is eagerly read, and visitors from the Pacific coast are kept busy answering questions wherever they go. Although the opening of the Fair is several months away, the rush of travel to Oregon has already begun, and every westbound train is crowded with homeseekers. Mr. Vaughn says that a brief and well-written descriptive pamphlet, setting forth the resources and advantages of Dallas and the surrounding country, would be the best investment of money the people of this city could possibly make at the present time.

TALKS FROM FARMERS

One-Hundred and Fifty Letters Telling of Their Success in the Pacific Northwest.

One of the most attractive and convincing advertising pamphlets setting forth the resources of Oregon that has reached our desk, is the new O. R. & N. and S. P. publication entitled "What Farmers Have Done in Oregon, as Told by Themselves." The pamphlet contains several hundred letters from farmers, telling their actual experiences in farming in Oregon and what they have accomplished along the lines of agriculture, horticulture and stock raising. Among the letters we find the following:

James Elliott, Dallas, Oregon—I own a farm of 150 acres one mile south of Dallas. On this place there are 50 acres of young fruit orchard, consisting of prunes, apples, pears, cherries, and several varieties of nuts. Twenty acres of prunes in bearing produced 55,000 pounds of fruit this season, which will bring over 3 cents per pound. I picked 1,000 bushels of apples from 15 acres of young orchard; also sold 1,000 pounds of Royal Anne cherries. I have on the farm 50 head of goats which about double in number and profit each year. I raise 40 head of hogs each season for market. I cleared $2,000 this year. Adjoining land can be purchased from $20 to $25 per acre.

M. M. Ellis, Dallas, Oregon—I have 60 acres of bearing prune orchard, 12 years old. The yield from this orchard last year in dried prunes was 127,000 pounds, which sold at an average price of something over 3 cents a pound. The entire cost of picking, drying the prunes, etc., was $1500. My orchard represents an investment of $200 an acre.
