Rev. H. Wyse Jones, state evangelist of the Baptist church, is conducting a series of special evangelistic services in Dallas. From the opening meeting on Monday evening, the attendance has been large at each service, and much interest is manifested. Rev. Jones is a logical and convincing speaker, and resorts to no sensational methods in his work. He preaches upon the vital themes of Redemption and asks his hearers to weigh carefully the questions discussed and make their own decisions, believing that a calm, voluntary acceptance of the truth will prove more lasting good than any result of wrought-up emotions. Rev. Jones is a pleasant man to meet, and has made many friends during his brief stay in Dallas.
