Although dealing with the most delicate subject in the history of the stage, the freedom of "Ben-Hur" from anything that might grate upon the nerves of the most religiously sensitive, has earned the endorsement of the very best people in every community. To describe "Ben Hur," reference should be made to it as a series of magnificent pictures illustrating the times of the Messiah on earth. The most conspicuous scenes in the enactment are the "Star of Bethlehem," the "City of Jerusalem," from the terrace garden of the Palace of Hur in Judea, "the interior of a Roman galley," "grove of Daphne," "Fountain of Castalia," "the exciting Sophia J Plumer, 1041 acres, t7 s, r 3 w, Roman Charlot Race," "Vale of Hinnom," and "Mount of Olives."
