Red Wing defeated Eugene by a score of 23 to 11. The Telegram correspondent at Eugene says the Red Wing boys were "past masters in all kinds of clever passing and faking motions that threw the varsity players off their guard." Must have picked up some pointers in Dallas and Corvallis. They didn't do anything of that kind here.

Mrs. John Ridders died at her home at Ridder's Grove, at noon Thursday, after a brief illness. On Wednesday, twin babies, a boy and a girl, were born, and the little girl died a few hours later, to be followed on Thursday by the mother. The other child survives. Mrs. Ridders was 22 years of age, and was a native of Wisconsin.

Alex G. Riddell, so long an employe in the office of the Holmes Coal & Ice Company, in Portland, has engaged in business for himself and is now secretary and treasurer of the Liberty Coal & Ice Company, of that city. The new firm's office is at 249 Pine street. Mr. Riddell is a former Dallas boy, and has many friends here who will wish him the greatest success in his new venture.

The "Hiawatha" entertainment was repeated at the Woodman Hall last Friday evening to a fair-sized audience. An entire change was made in the musical program, and the second performance was in every way as enjoyable as the first. The women of Mistotee Circle are to be congratulated upon the high grade of entertainment furnished the people of Dallas in these two performances.

N. P. Rasmussen, a progressive farmer residing three miles east of Dallas, was in town, Monday. He takes a lively interest in the move that is being made to establish a cheese factory in Dallas, and will increase his herd of dairy cows if the factory is secured. He estimates that the milk of 45 cows can be obtained in his immediate neighborhood from the start. Mr. Rasmussen is a staunch advocate of diversified farming, and is demonstrating the success of his methods in a practical way.

The Washington supper given by the Young Men's Club of the Presbyterian church at Woodman Hall last night was a great success, and a neat sum of money for the club treasury was realized. The supper was served in courses, and was prepared in the very best style of the culinary art. The boys are highly pleased with the success of the affair.

The ringing of the fire bell aroused the people of Dallas from their slumbers at 10:30 o'clock, Monday night, and the firemen were soon racing through mud and rain to the home of Volney Holmes, on West Main street, where a fire was fast gaining headway in the roof at the rear of the building. Connection with the hydrant was quickly made, and the flames were soon extinguished. The fire was caused by a defective chimney. Further than the destruction of a portion of the roof and a thorough flooding of the kitchen by water, little damage was caused. The firemen deserve great credit for their prompt and effective work.

F. K. Hubbard, one of Polk county's most successful dairymen, was in town from his farm home near Falls City, Monday. He is proud of the record of two of his fine Jersey heifers, and would like to know if it has been beaten in Oregon. One of them gave birth to a fine calf at the age of 11 months and 3 days, and the other increased his Jersey herd by one at the age of 11 months and 12 days. He says if anyone can beat this record, he would be pleased to hear of it. He says the farmers living along the line of the Dallas and Falls City railroad are deeply interested in the agitation for a cheese factory in Dallas, and believes that the milk of 75 cows could be secured from the beginning of the industry.

HONORED PIONEER GONE

Samuel Coad, One of Dallas' Oldest Residents, Dies of Neuralgia of the Heart.

Samuel Coad, an Oregon pioneer of 1863, and one of Dallas' oldest and most honored citizens, died of neuralgia of the heart, Tuesday morning, at 8:30 o'clock, aged 73 years and 1 day. He had been in failing health for several years. About a year ago he suffered a severe stroke of paralysis, and from that time on he rapidly grew more feeble. He was able to walk about and to attend to his business affairs, however, and his sudden death was unexpected by his family. Sunday night he complained of neuralgia in his breast and arms, and was able to sleep but little. He arose early Monday morning and, after eating breakfast, laid down on a couch before the fire to rest. A few moments afterwards, he gave a sudden gasp and expired almost instantly.

Samuel Coad was born in Pennsylvania, February 19, 1833. His parents John and Jane (Jeffrey) Coad were natives of England. Their family consisted of 16 children, 11 of whom were born in England and five in the United States. In 1842, they moved to Iowa, where the father died at the age of 80 years, and the mother at the age of 76 years.

Mr. Coad learned the carpenter trade in Iowa, and when he was 21 years old, came to Oregon, working his passage across the plains by driving a team for John Wolverton. He arrived in Salem in September, 1853, and after working at his trade for a few weeks, came to Polk county, where he built a house for John Phillips. After spending the winter at the home of Mr. Phillips, he went to Southern Oregon and prospected for gold on the Rogue River, near Jacksonville. He next returned to Polk county and worked at the carpenter trade at Lewisville, in partnership with J. J. Williams. Later he worked for the Government, and was employed in building block-houses. When the Indian War broke out in 1855, he volunteered his services, went to the front, and was in the engagement at Snake river.

In the spring of 1858, he married Miss Henrietta Gilliam, daughter of General Gilliam, and settled on the Luckiamute, where he took up 140 acres of land. Here he farmed for five or six years. He then purchased a farm one mile east of Dallas, and subsequently purchased an interest in a drug business in Dallas, in partnership with his brother-in-law, B. F. Nichols. His wife died in 1874, and on June 25, 1876, he was married to Miss Annie McNeal, a twin sister of Mrs. J. S. Cooper, of Independence. These sisters were the first white children born in Dodge county, Nebraska, and, after the death of their parents were adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Emmons, well-known early pioneers of Dallas.

Mr. Coad is survived by his wife; one brother, Harry Coad, of Des Moines, Iowa; four sons—F. J. Coad and C. G. Coad, of Dallas; Jasper Coad and George Coad, of Portland, and one daughter, Mrs. John B. Stump, of Monmouth. His daughter, Maggie, (Mrs. T. B. Rowell) died in 1890, and his youngest daughter, Retta, in 1892. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity for 35 years. He was a Republican in politics, but never was a candidate for office.

The foregoing is a brief history of a long, busy and useful life; a life that was free from any stain or blemish, and in which selfishness had no part. It is the history of one who started out to make his way in the world unaided by wealth or position, and who fought his way through every obstacle and discouragement to the final goal of success. Samuel Coad was an honorable, upright citizen, a faithful friend, and a good neighbor. The memory of his clean and blameless life will ever be fondly cherished in the hearts of those he left behind.

The funeral was conducted from the family home yesterday afternoon by Rev. D. Julian Becker, pastor of the Presbyterian church, and was largely attended. The remains were laid to rest in the old Dallas cemetery with Masonic honors by the officers and members of Jennings Lodge, No. 9, A. F. & A. M., of this city. All the business houses of Dallas were closed during the afternoon as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased.

Grandma Irvine is seriously ill at the home of her son-in-law, Sheriff J. T. Ford, and no hope is entertained of her recovery.

The many friends of Mrs. Martha Cosper will be glad to learn that she has so far recovered from the effects of her recent accident as to be able to walk again.
