Rural Northwest.

There was an unkind slam at goat meat in the market column of the Daily Oregonian a few days ago. It Smith, 153.40 acres, t9 s, r5 w, $1534.40. was the reflection of an old-time prejudice which it is necessary for Kee, land in t 6 s, r 5 w and t 7 s, r 6 Angora raisers to constantly combat. w. $16,000. The best place to start in to overcome this prejudice is right at home.

Hotels in towns like Dallas, Oregon, should be induced to make a specialty of serving Angora venison or Angora mutton, whichever they choose to call it, on their tables, and the goat raisers should see to it that these hotels are supplied with good goat meat and not lot in Dallas, $600. with carcasses of ancient wethers whose failing teeth have consigned acres, t 8 s, r 6 w, $1. them to the shambles.

Then, too, the meat markets of such Orsdel, 80 acres, t 8 s, r 6 w, $700. towns should be persuaded to keep and sell Angora meat under its own name. Aside from the people who keep goats it is not probable that even in Oregon one person in a thousand has knowingly eaten the flesh of Angora goats, although the proportion | acres, t 9 s, r 6 w, patent, of those who have eaten it as mutton is very much larger.

A few years ago Mr. C. E. Holtgreive who then kept quite a large herd of 161.60 acres, t 8 s, r 7 w, patent. Angora goats near Portland frequently slaughtered wethers and sold the carcasses to a meat market in Port-Iand. The customers who bought the meat for mutton did not object to it; on the contrary they wanted more mutton of the same kind. Of course, tough eating, and so is an old, thin $4000, wether of the sheep kind or an old ox.

Within a few years the disposition Holman, 240 acres, t 8 s, r 5 w, $1. of wether goats will become one of grave importance in Oregon, as the J Logan and J D Holman, 240 acres, number of goats in the state is steadily | t 8 s, r 5 w, $1. growing at a rapid rate and is likely to continue to do so for a good many years to come.
