 There isn't a better news story in the Osserven this week than that contained in the Willamette Valley Company's advertisement. The announcement that the day power current is soon to be turned on is of great importance, as it means that a complete revolution is to be brought about in all manufacturing enterprises. The advertisement also contains an announcement of interest to every housewife.
 Step into the Crider Grocery and take a look. Fruits and vegetables of every description, also a full line of Heinz's goods, National Biscuit Co.'s products and Dodson-Braun's celebrated hot stuffs. Just received a fresh shipment of MacLaren's cheese, in glass, also some good old Limburger. Santos coffee fresh from the roaster every two weeks. Preferred Stock and Royal Club canned goods. Our peach flour is giving entire satisfaction wherever used. In fact, our store is full of the best of all descriptions.

A correspondent in this week's Itemizer advocates the removal of the county jail from its present building to the basement of the courthouse. While this change may seem desirable on first thought, there are many reasons why it should not be made. The increased danger of fire, the odor of cooked food permeating every office and hall, and the noise created by rowdy prisoners all furnish good reason why the jail should be left where it is. The counties that have their jails in their courthouse basements would be glad to have them somewhere else.
