Exhibit of Blooded Angoras Surpasses That of Any Former Year.

Oregon's eighth annual Angora goat show opened here Wednesday morning, larger and better in every way than any that has been held heretofore. One hundred and seventy goats are on exhibition, just 50 more than were shown last year.

A significant feature of the show this year is the large number of registered animals on display. For the first time in Oregon, the thoroughbred animals outnumber the grade goats exhibited. Goat breeders are in attendance from all the Valley counties, and there are goodly delegations from California, Southern Oregon, Polk, Benton and Washington counties.

The judges were selected yesterday morning and began their work in the afternoon. The judges in the thoroughbred class are: George Boothby, of Monmouth; O. E. Focht, of Ballston; L. D. Mulkey, of Amity; in the grade class, E. L. Naylor, of Forest Grove; W. Warfield, of Alsea, and M. M. Nickell, of McMinnville.

The Sanford Mills, of Sanford, Me., have a beautiful display of mohair goods, consisting of car seat plush, carriage robes, rugs and other materials woven entirely from Angora mohair. The exhibit of chickens, hogs and sheep is as large as usual, and divides interest to some extent with the goat show.

A public meeting was held in the Courthouse last night, and papers on the goat industry were read by prominent and successful breeders of the Pacific Coast States. The night meetings are a new feature of the Oregon show. The show will close this afternoon.

MISS LOU LEWIS DEAD

Although Blind for Over Fifty Years, Was Cheerful to the End.

After an illness of several days from pneumonia, Miss Louisa E. Lewis died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Fannie Davis, at Philomath, Sunday afternoon at 2:15 o'clock.

Funeral services were held Tuesday morning and burial took place in the Newton cemetery. Miss Lewis was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Lewis, early pioneers of Polk county. She was a sister of the late James W. Lewis, of Oak Grove, and of John H. Lewis, of Salem. Speaking of her death, the Corvallis Times says:

"Miss Lewis was 65 years of age. She enjoyed a wide acquaintance, and, being a person of admirable disposition, held a warm place in the hearts of those with whom she became in any way associated. At the age of thirteen years she became totally blind from a slight accident, but this misfortune seemed not to interfere with an ambition to become a useful factor of society.

Although the sunlight of her life could not enter through the 'windows of the soul,' it nevertheless in some manner found its way thither and was refracted upon her surroundings with unusual beneficence. She was offered the advantages of schools for the blind, and her accomplishments in which the sense of sight is deemed indispensable, was remarkable in the extreme.

Her life was a valuable object lesson for those to whom misfortune has come, as well as to those in possession of all their faculties."
