

Polk County Observer

Legal blanks at this office.
Skating tonight at the Colosseum rink.

For lots in Ellis Addition, see H. G. Campbell.
All the news in the Twice-a-week Observer.

Printing, the kind that pays, at the Observer office.
Born, Tuesday, April 9, to Mr. and Mrs. Peter Berg, of this city, a daughter.

Mrs. J. H. Lawton is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Belt in Independence.

Money of private parties to loan at 6 per cent on well-improved farms. SHLEY & EAKIN.

C. J. Pugh, the Falls City telephone manager, was a business visitor in Portland, Saturday.

The Observer wants live correspondents at Ballston and Pedee. Write us for further information.

Patronize the new barber shop on Main street. T. W. Reel, the proprietor, guarantees first-class work.

S. D. Steffy left on Saturday for Kansas City, where he will meet his aged parents and accompany them to Oregon. They will arrive in Dallas next week.

Wood choppers and wood contractors wanted to cut wood for the Salem, Falls City & Western Ry. Co. Apply to the General Manager's office, Dallas, Or.

Born, March 29, 1907, to Dr. and Mrs. Arthur R. Butler, of Washington, D. C., a daughter. The news of this birth came in a letter from Dr. Butler to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Butler, of Falls City.

Ralph Carter and Bert R. Elliott, of Dallas, were among the senior graduates in the class recently taking the examination before the State Board of Pharmacy. They are bright young men and will succeed in their chosen profession.

Governor Chamberlain has appointed Martin E. Robinson to act as musical director to the Oregon Girls' Drill Club on their trip to the Jamestown Exposition. Mr. Robinson conducted the recent production of "Belshazzar" by local musical talent in Dallas and is now preparing to put on the sacred cantata, "Queen Esther," in Eugene.

E. Lipton, the enterprising real estate dealer of Falls City, was a county seat visitor yesterday. He was elected councilman-at-large of his home town by a unanimous vote at the recent municipal election, his name having been placed on all three tickets without opposition. Bro. Lipton wears his new honors with becoming modesty.

A. J. Gump, of Benton county, is in Dallas on a business visit. Mr. and Mrs. Gump have just returned from a two months' visit at their old home in Pennsylvania. Mr. Gump combined business with his visit by buying several hundred acres of valuable oil land in West Virginia before leaving for home. A company has been formed to develop the property and rich returns are promised.

April showers.
Legal Blanks for sale at this office.

L. D. Brown, for Abstracts, Notary Public; typewriting.

Claude Dunn, of Portland, was a Dallas visitor, Sunday.

The Dallas grocery stores now close at 6:30 instead of 6 p. m.

Wheat, 70 cents a bushel today at the Dallas Flouring Mill.

Hon. G. W. Myer was a business visitor in Portland, Saturday.

The Observer office wants the printing you are particular about.

For the best cigars and freshest candies, call on Horace Webster.

Mr. and Mrs. George Siefarth, of Falls City, visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Campbell today.

Lots in Levens' Third Addition are selling fast—lots, $250; $100 cash; time on balance. H. G. CAMPBELL.

Miss Rebecca Gates arrived home Friday from an extended visit with relatives in Lebanon and Portland.

Little Leone Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otho Williams, is suffering from a severe attack of pneumonia.

Hon. D. L. Keyt, the well-known merchant and mill man of Perrydale, was a business visitor in Dallas yesterday.

Dr. H. L. Toney, dentist; graduate of Ann Arbor, Michigan. Office upstairs Uglow building. Hours 8 to 12 and 1 to 5. Examinations free. Phone 45.

Bert Gwinn has moved his family from Dallas back to Moonmouth. Mr. Gwinn will remain in Dallas, where he is employed in the mill.—Independence West Side.

H. C. Eakin, accompanied by his son, Jack, went to Portland last Friday and met his brother, John W. Eakin, who was on his way to Dallas from Cairo, Illinois.

J. M. Pollock has purchased a fruit farm near Forest Grove and will move there with his family in a few weeks. He is now disposing of his household goods. The departure of Mr. Pollock and his estimable family from Dallas will be greatly regretted.

Rev. Chester Gates visited his mother, Mrs. D. M. Metzger, in Dallas yesterday. He has been transferred from Brooks to St. Johns and will take charge of his new pastorate this week. Rev. Orrie Arnold has been assigned to the Brooks church.

John W. Eakin, of Cairo, Illinois, arrived in Dallas, Saturday morning, for an all-summer visit at the home of his brother, H. C. Eakin. Mr. Eakin is no stranger in Dallas, this being his third visit to Oregon, and he finds himself busy greeting old friends and acquaintances. For many years Mr. Eakin has occupied the responsible position of superintendent of the street-car, gas and electric light systems in Cairo, and the continued strain of overwork has told on his nerves and strength and made a long vacation necessary. Having found rest and health on the occasions of his former brief visits to Oregon, it was but natural for him to turn his face Westward when seeking a place to spend a longer vacation. His many friends are glad to welcome him back to Dallas.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Get on skates at the Colosseum rink.

Hon. J. O. Staats, of Airline, was in town yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Riggs, of Moonmouth, visited in Dallas, Sunday.

James Simonton, of West Salem, was a county seat visitor yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. William Bush, of Pedee, are visitors in Dallas today.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Casey moved to the Craven house on Main street yesterday.

If you want to see something fine in silk waist patterns, go to the Racket store.

Complete stock of Myers' spray pumps just received at Guy Bros. & Dalton's.

Finest building lots in the city in Levens' Third Addition. See H. G. Campbell.

Hon. J. S. Cooper, of Independence, passed through Dallas, Saturday evening, on his way home from a business visit to Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Mehring, of Falls City, attended the state conventions of the Knights and Ladies of the Macabees in Portland last week.

Dr. and Mrs. L. A. Bollman will be given a reception by the members of the Epworth League at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Hawkins tonight.

Frank J. Morrison, for many years a liveryman of this city, has returned to Dallas with his family after a several years' residence in Eastern Washington and Idaho.

New plumbing supplies of all kinds at G. W. Vaughn's. Call up Mutual Phone 1337 when you want the best plumbing and tinning. Estimates on all work cheerfully furnished.

Mrs. Sarah Richmond is preparing to build a neat cottage on the lot adjoining her residence on Court street. The lumber is on the ground and the carpenters will commence work in a few days. Mrs. Richmond will occupy the new cottage and will rent the old home dwelling.

John Cameron's barn on the old J. P. Starr farm, near Falls City, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon. A large amount of feed and a set of harness valued at $40 were burned. The fire was started by Mr. Cameron's little son, who was playing with matches in the barn.

The Uncle Tom's Cabin moving picture entertainment will be given in Dallas, Saturday evening, under the auspices of the local K. of P. lodge. The exhibition has been given in Independence and Falls City, and the house was packed to the doors in both places.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

Old Gip, the Chinaman, who has been living on the H. G. Campbell farm south of town for several years, died of senile exhaustion last Friday. He was 87 years old and had been in the United States since 1842. He was a miner in California for many years, and afterward followed the same occupation in Jackson county, Oregon. At one time he was the possessor of considerable wealth, but lost it in unprofitable ventures. For some time before his death, he had been supported by the county. His remains were given burial in the old Dallas cemetery.

FROM DALLAS TO THE SEA

President Gerlinger Announces That Road Will Be Extended into Siletz Basin.

(Sunday Oregonian.)

Extension of the Salem, Falls City & Western Railroad to the sea, finding a terminus either at Newport or on Siletz Bay, is announced by President Gerlinger. The road now ends a few miles west of Falls City, on the east side of the Coast range. Surveys have been completed by which an easy route has been found across the mountains and down into the Siletz Basin.

Work is to begin within a short time on construction of the road westward. It is planned to lay rails during the coming summer to a point where a tunnel will be bored through the summit of the mountains. A grade of 2 1/2 per cent has been secured by engineers in running the preliminary line across the mountains.

Engineers report an adverse grade of 1 per cent for traffic from the Siletz Basin eastward. By means of a tunnel through the range, an alternate route over the mountains can be obtained, making a saving of 15 miles between Falls City and the Siletz country.

"A good route has been secured," said President Gerlinger, "and some of the new mileage will be built during the coming summer. I cannot say just how much will be constructed this season."

To tap a large timber belt is, of course, the principal object of the extension of the line. The Siletz country is immensely rich in fir timber. The quality of the wood is said to be unsurpassed by any standing body of timber on the Coast.

After the timber is cleared off, the Siletz country will be adapted to dairying, and will doubtless prove as well suited for the purpose as the celebrated Tillamook district. The Siletz Basin is now isolated, and its greatest need is transportation facilities.

After the timber is cleared off, the Siletz country will be adapted to dairying, and will doubtless prove as well suited for the purpose as the celebrated Tillamook district. The Siletz Basin is now isolated, and its greatest need is transportation facilities.

After the timber is cleared off, the Siletz country will be adapted to dairying, and will doubtless prove as well suited for the purpose as the celebrated Tillamook district. The Siletz Basin is now isolated, and its greatest need is transportation facilities.

After the timber is cleared off, the Siletz country will be adapted to dairying, and will doubtless prove as well suited for the purpose as the celebrated Tillamook district. The Siletz Basin is now isolated, and its greatest need is transportation facilities.

After the timber is cleared off, the Siletz country will be adapted to dairying, and will doubtless prove as well suited for the purpose as the celebrated Tillamook district. The Siletz Basin is now isolated, and its greatest need is transportation facilities.

After the timber is cleared off, the Siletz country will be adapted to dairying, and will doubtless prove as well suited for the purpose as the celebrated Tillamook district. The Siletz Basin is now isolated, and its greatest need is transportation facilities.

After the timber is cleared off, the Siletz country will be adapted to dairying, and will doubtless prove as well suited for the purpose as the celebrated Tillamook district. The Siletz Basin is now isolated, and its greatest need is transportation facilities.

After the timber is cleared off, the Siletz country will be adapted to dairying, and will doubtless prove as well suited for the purpose as the celebrated Tillamook district. The Siletz Basin is now isolated, and its greatest need is transportation facilities.

After the timber is cleared off, the Siletz country will be adapted to dairying, and will doubtless prove as well suited for the purpose as the celebrated Tillamook district. The Siletz Basin is now isolated, and its greatest need is transportation facilities.

After the timber is cleared off, the Siletz country will be adapted to dairying, and will doubtless prove as well suited for the purpose as the celebrated Tillamook district. The Siletz Basin is now isolated, and its greatest need is transportation facilities.</