

How to Confine Leghorns.
The usual method of keeping Leghorns is to confine them in yards having fences about six feet high and with reasonable yard room they will rarely fly over, especially if there is no post top above the wire for the birds to alight upon. Fowls almost never fly directly over a fence, but fly up on to the top of it and then fly down. Taking advantage of this habit, it is easy to stretch a couple of strands of wire above the fence posts with slim staves to support them. When a bird flies up to light on the post top the wire prevents, and the attempt is rarely repeated.

Caponizing an Old Practice.
R. T. Will, writing to Western Poultry Journal, says: I notice numerous articles in the poultry journals these days explaining what "caponizing" are and the methods of procedure in the operation of caponizing. That caponizing is not a recent discovery is deduced from the fact that Shakespeare causes Hamlet to mention capons in a conversation with the king, scene 2, act 4, so that "caponizing" was known in the sixteenth century and perhaps earlier.

Rest is the great restorer. We tire our muscles by exercise and then rest to restore them; yet a great many of us do not stop to think how little rest we give to our stomach. As a usual thing no part of our bodies is so generally overworked as our digestive organs. A tired and overworked stomach will give signs of distress to which we pay no heed until at last dyspepsia takes hold. Indigestion is just a warning, and if we heed the warning we can easily avoid further consequences. KODOL is a most thorough stomach relief. It digests what you eat and gives the stomach the needed rest and greatly assists in restoring it to its normal activity and usefulness. KODOL is sold on a guarantee relief plan. It is sold here by all druggists.
