A LAKENFELDER COCKEREL

A Typical Specimen of a Valuable but Little Understood Breed.

There has been during the last few years a good deal of discussion as to the origin of the Lakenfelder (also spelled Lakenfelder) fowl. By some it is asserted that this bird was developed in the middle districts of France by repeated crosses of what are now known as Blue Andalusians and Black Minorcas with the common fowls of the section, such as the Rhode Island Reds were the result of constant introductions of Buff Cochins and the old Shanghai blood. The more reasonable view, however, is that the Lakenfelder is really the native fowl of Belgium.

But no matter where he came from originally, it is certain that he deserves to be more highly regarded in this country, where he is just beginning to make his merits known. In body the Lakenfelder is long, with a fine carcass and flesh of exceptionally delicate quality. Some Lakenfelders (at least those which have not been overbred by too close inbreeding for feather) have proved to be as good layers as the very best strains of Leghorns, which are generally regarded as "egg machines." The Lakenfelder is hardy to a degree and bears confinement exceedingly well, although he is also an excellent forager and a comparatively small eater.

The Lakenfelder does well in a warm climate, but ought to be particularly valuable as a farm chicken in the colder portions of the country, for he really seems to be almost impervious to cold, the hens laying very nearly as well in winter as in summer when they are properly bred for egg production.

The Good Old Cochins

We are pleased to notice that many writers are coming back to the old Cochins and mentioning them as most valuable for producing market poultry, says the Feather. One writer states that he yet fatters several hundred of the old Yellow Cochins of the kind that lay so many eggs. Another states that he uses Partridge Cochins exclusively for the production of winter eggs and dressed poultry for market, always copulating the cockerels and gaining a good profit from their sale in January. Many persons are pleased to admit the Cochins fowls as valuable for market producing stock. There was a time when the Cochins stood at the head of the list for market poultry and eggs. Too many feathers and too much cultivation along nonutility lines made a change in them.

Wheat For the Hens.

We are glad to notice that the agricultural press throughout the country has taken up the cry of more wheat and less corn for laying hens, says the Feather. So soon as the people throughout the country learn that corn will not produce many eggs during the winter months and that wheat will produce a profitable egg yield the more pleased will they be with the results of egg production from their hens. Too much corn assures an empty egg basket. Plenty of wheat bids fair for a profitable egg production.

Pork Scraps For Poultry.

Pork scraps are relished by poultry, but are not generally considered as satisfactory as beef scrap. However, they analyze about the same, except that the pork scrap contains rather more fat. Pork cracklings and beef cracklings should have about the same feeding value. They are not as rich in protein as prepared scrap, but can be used as a substitute for a scrap with quite satisfactory results.

Early Maturity of Rhode Island Reds.

March 21, 1906, I hatched ten chickens, Rhode Island Reds, says a correspondent. One died March 23. Five of the balance are cockerels and began crowing June 11. One pullet developed leg weakness, and I had her put out for her suffering. Another developed to about four and a half pounds and laid her first egg July 18.

Pure coffees, spices, jams and candies will henceforth command a considerably higher price than has been asked for the adulterated concoction of which they have heretofore formed but a small part. It is quite likely, however, that the shoddy, adulterated product will suffer a corresponding slump in price.

Late official estimates of the value of crops raised in the United States during the year passed show that hay was third in the list, with a value of $900,000,000; wheat fourth, with a value of $450,000,000; oats fifth, with $300,000,000; potatoes sixth, with a yield of 300,000,000 bushels, valued at $150,000,000. Rice stands twelfth in order, with a yield of 770,000,000 pounds, valued at $18,000,000.

A number of western county superintendents of schools have obtained long time leases on their jobs by inaugurating corn growing contests among the pupils of the different school districts in their counties. These contests, which usually wind up with an exhibit of the corn grown, have not only helped to vitalize and add interest to school work, but have resulted in a distinct gain to the agricultural interests of the communities in which they have been held.

CURE YOUR KIDNEYS.

Do Not Endanger Life When a Sufferer Shows You the Cure.

Why will people continue to suffer the agonies of kidney complaint, backache, urinary disorders, lameness, headaches, languor, why allow themselves to become chronic invalids, when a certain cure is offered them?

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use, because it gives to the kidneys the help they need to perform their work.

If you have any, even one, of the symptoms of kidney diseases, cramp your self now, before diabetes, dropsy or Bright's disease sets in.

Mrs. I. Hodson, of 717 Anra St., Pendleton, Ore., says: "I just as enthusiastically endorse Doan's Kidney Pills today as I did nearly three years ago. They relieved me of kidney trouble which had bothered me for a considerable time. There was aching pains across the small of my back and down through my kidneys, which were aggravated by colds which settled in the back and loins and caused an awful lameness. This was my condition when I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. This remedy banished the backache and pains through the loins, regulated the kidney secretions and removed every symptom of the trouble. From that day to this there has been no recurrence, and I give Doan's Kidney Pills all the credit. I consider them to be the best kidney remedy procurable and recommend them whenever the occasion arises."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.
