DRAFT HORSE ESSENTIALS.

Some Points to be Considered in Breeding Them. The action of a draft horse is a point which is receiving more attention than it formerly did. A horse to command the very highest price must move well. He must be good at the walk and also do the trotting act fairly well. Length of stride and straightness of stride are the two most important points to be considered at the walk. Sureness is also essential. Height of action and flashiness are attractive, but not necessarily utility points. Winging, padding or rolling action in front and wabbling hocks are all features which every good horseman condemns, thus are discriminated against at all of the leading horse markets.

Food For Ducklings.

The proper food for young ducklings depends upon the time of year. When from one to five days old they need boiled egg and breadcrumbs finely chopped. After that age meal, preference given to oatmeal, and middlings in like proportion until they are three to four weeks old. Then grain in their water.

The Scratching Shed.

A scratching shed should be built tight so that the fowls are sheltered from the wind. The south side should be open or, on very cold days, covered with light muslin or other thin cloth.

SHALL HE FERTILIZER?

A reader of this department residing in Los Angeles and owning a large farm in Illinois writes making inquiry as to the value of phosphates as a fertilizer for his own and other Illinois corn farms, citing reports of the Illinois experiment station farms in way of introducing his query. There is little reason to suspect that the reports of the state experiment station are biased or colored because of financial interest which the directors of the work might have in concern offering such phosphates for sale, and we believe that their findings can be taken at face value. While there would seem to be slight call for commercial fertilizer on any farm which has been properly and wisely managed and in which the products of the soil have been sold in the finished form of beef, pork, mutton and butter instead of in the raw grain form, in the latter case the application of a certain amount of commercial fertilizer of the kind mentioned would seem to be advisable and calculated to return to the soil elements of which it has been robbed through years of uninterrupted and none too careful cropping. If one has serious doubts as to the efficacy of such treatment it would seem to be wise to make a careful test of such artificial fertilizers on a small scale—a few acres. Much would depend on the character of the soil and even more upon the kind of treatment which it had received, and such an experiment carefully conducted, with results noted, would seem to demonstrate beyond question whether the application of such fertilizer on the whole farm would be practical and justifiable. There is so much opportunity for the adulteration of commercial fertilizers that we question the wisdom of using the output of any company unless it is recommended by one's own state experiment station. As showing the benefit of artificial fertilizers we note an experiment conducted through a period of seven years by the Ohio experiment station, which showed that a plot of land fertilized with stale or bleached manure produced an average yield per acre of 51 bushels of corn, 15.00 bushels of wheat and 1,950 pounds of hay. An adjoining plot fertilized with stale manure, re-enforced by a phosphate, yielded an average of 61.23 bushels of corn, 24.28 bushels of wheat and 3,835 pounds of hay.

THE SAN JOSE SCALE.

The San Jose scale, whose ravages have meant a loss of millions of dollars to the fruit growers of the country, was first introduced in this country in the early seventies on the grounds of James Lick of San Jose, Cal., and from that time on there has been a good deal of question as to what country was the original home of the pest. Explorations and investigations lately conducted by representatives of the agricultural department at Washington prove quite conclusively that the scale insect is a native of certain districts in China, where its ravages seem to have been comparatively insignificant, conditions not having been favorable to its propagation. Transferred to this country, however, it spread with amazing rapidity, attacking not only fruit, but other deciduous trees as well. Several varieties of insects have been found which seem to be natural enemies of the scale insect, but the largest measure of relief has come from thorough spraying with the well known sulphur wash, which has not only protected orchards against this, but other fungus enemies.

TOO MUCH WORK.

"Too much work" is the verdict that may be produced in the case of altogether too many middle aged and elderly men and women. With some of this large class it has been a case of necessity, a condition which they have not entered or remained in voluntarily. With others the condition of being forever and always head over heels in work is one that is assumed and in most cases out of pure selfishness and greed for gain. Followed up in the case of the man, it means stooped shoulders and a broken body at fifty, stomach out of whack oftentimes and constitution depleted. The long years of unceasing toil, with little or no let-up or recreation, have meant the same kind of a breakdown for the wife, while younger members of the family, sons and daughters, have acquired a deep seated dislike for farm work and everything that pertains to the farm that is very difficult to remove. Work is one of the greatest boons to the human race, but it becomes a curse when the blessings which follow in its train do not outweigh its blighting ill effects.

A $150 EAR OF CORN.

At the close of the short course in corn and stock judging which was held at the Iowa experiment station at Ames the first two weeks in January all of the prize corn which was on exhibit was auctioned off to the highest bidders. The prize sweepstakes ear, which was of the Reid's yellow dent variety, was about fourteen inches long and weighed twenty ounces, being pronounced by Professor Holden, the corn expert, as the finest ear of corn he had ever seen. When this was put up at auction it ran up to $150, at which price it was bid in by the man who raised it. A bushel of corn at this rate would be worth about $8,500, while a single kernel of the ear in question is worth about 13 cents. The interest which has been aroused among the corn growers of the state in the matter of bushels of thoroughbred corn to the acre is very keen, and the present year promises to be productive of even more striking results than the last has been.

Long Live The King!

is the popular cry throughout European countries; while in America, the cry of the present day is "Long live Dr. King's New Discovery, King of Throat and Lung Remedies!" of which Mrs. Julia Ryder Paine, Truro, Mass., says: "It never fails to give immediate relief and to quickly cure a cough or cold." Nearly every reader has heard of Doan's Kidney Pills. Their good work still continues, and our citizens are constantly adding endorsement by public testimony. No better proof of merit can be had than the experience of friends and neighbors. Read this case: Mrs. N. Swaggett, of 819 Garden St., Pendleton, Ore., says: "Both my husband and myself have used Doan's Kidney Pills with most gratifying results. Mr. Swaggett was troubled quite severely with his back and kidneys for a long time, and nothing ever helped him as Doan's Kidney Pills have. I have known of the healing and curative power of this remedy for some time, and found that a few doses would quickly remove any lameness or pain in the back caused by kidney derangement. I am glad to help make Doan's Kidney Pills better known to all afflicted with backache or kidney trouble."
