TIMBER LAND, ACT JUNE 3, 1878.
United States Land Office,
Portland, Oregon,
June 12, 1907.

Notice is hereby given that in compliance with the provisions of the act of Congress of June 3, 1878, entitled "An act for the sale of timber lands in the States of California, Oregon, Nevada, and Washington Territory," as extended to all the Public Land States by act of August 4, 1892, William W. Chappell, of Falls City, county of Polk, State of Oregon, has this day filed in this office his sworn statement No 7453, for the purchase of the N. ½ of the S. W. ¼ Section No. 10, in Township No. 8 S. of Range No. 8 W., and will offer proof to show that the land sought is more valuable for its timber or stone than for agricultural purposes, and to establish his claim to said land before the Register and Receiver of this office, at Portland, Oregon, on Friday, the 20th day of September, 1907.

He names as witnesses: William J. Southwell, of Falls City, Oregon; Roy McMurphy, of Falls City, Oregon; George Bagley, of Portland, Oregon; F. A. Lucas, of Falls City, Oregon; C. Kramer, of Falls City, Oregon.

Any and all persons claiming adversely the above-described lands are requested to file their claims in this office on or before said 20th day of September, 1907.

To Tell Gander From Goose.

The question of distinguishing the male from the female goose has often been asked. The voice of the gander is louder and the females more silvery. Then again the gander when approaching will bend his head and neck close to the ground and "hiss," whereas the goose will keep it erect. The sexes have often been detected by the aid of a dog, which when admitted to pens all females will gather to the farthest wall or corner, and the males, with bended necks, will hiss.

Advice to Farm Poultrymen.

Industrious fowls are the kind to keep. It matters not what the breed is, the lazy hen is unprofitable. It is the industrious hen that produces eggs. Every farmer should raise over 100 fowls for use on his own home table. There is nothing better, cheaper or more convenient to the housekeeper than a flock of chickens to draw on for the table supply once or twice a week.

Dry Bran For Growing Stock.

Nothing is better for growing stock than dry bran. Hoppers of this might be profitably placed about the ranges where the young stock run. A hopper with a hood that protects it from the rain and is so constructed that the fowls cannot get their feet therein to scratch about is best for feeding the dry bran.

Space For Ducks.

With proper care and attention fifty ducks may be run on a very small space of ground. Fifty feet by twelve to fifteen feet would suffice.

FOUNTAINS AND TROUGHS.

Keep Them Clean or Disease Is Apt to Overtake Your Flock.

Nothing is so dangerous or so apt to be contaminated as the drinking vessel for man or beast, says the Feather. Poison sown in the stream soon spreads pestilence among those who may consume its contents down the waterway for many miles. Contamination of the water fountain or drinking vessels of poultry is the most prolific cause of the spread of disease. A fowl with the roup may drink but once from the fountain used by other fowls and spread the disease throughout the whole flock. Gapes, roup and contagious diseases of all kinds are carried from one to another through the infected water fountains. A fresh water supply is most valuable, but water kept in an infected vessel is dangerous and destructive. One may always feel absolutely certain that the infection has been removed from a vessel that has been thoroughly scalded or heated to almost burning point upon the stove. Nothing is more certain to remove all danger than this treatment, and a thorough cleansing with a brush or broom is more than likely to prove successful. Proper rinsing when no lurking danger is about is sufficient. Never allow an infected drinking vessel to be used by your poultry.

Next to this in point of danger is a sour feed trough that has been generally used by all fowls and left each time thereafter to become sour. Fermentation begins, and the destructive germs growing therein may spread a pestilence of chicken pox, roup or any other disease that may be prevalent in the neighborhood. This can be easily avoided by thoroughly cleansing the feed troughs and turning them upside down each time the poultry has been fed.

A Good Colony House.

The simplest poultry house that will do the work for which it is intended is naturally the best, especially when it combines simplicity with cheapness. The illustration herewith shows a colony coop which can be used as a laying house for a comparatively small flock. The dimensions of the one in the picture, which is taken from Reliable Poultry Journal, are as follows: Five by eight feet on the ground, six feet high in front and four feet high at the rear. For a house of these dimensions the total cost is given as $7.50. Of course it can be made of any size, although these general proportions ought to be preserved, and the height ought never to be increased at all. It is desirable to cover the roof of such a house as this with ordinary tarred felt laid horizontally, beginning at the eaves and lapping at least two inches on each breadth. The sides for cold climates ought also to be covered with the tarred felt, laid perpendicularly, with about the same lap, although a half inch more will do no harm in either place.

COLONY COOP.

Cochin Suggestions.

Keep the Cochins active before and during breeding time. If preparing them for exhibition keep them as quiet as possible.

Feed mash to your Cochins once a day, preferably at night. Mash promotes looseness of feathering.

A little sugar in the mash for late hatched chicks will develop them more rapidly, about a cup of sugar to three or four quarts of mash.

Separate your largest chicks from the smaller ones or the latter will not thrive. Yard the largest and give the smaller ones free range.

Clip away some of the fluff from both males and females.

Rickets.

Lack of nourishment is the cause.

NATIONAL ROAD BODY

Consolidation of All Highway Interests Suggested.

HOW SCHEME WOULD HELP.

Alfred Reeves Thinks More Effective Work In Securing Improved Roads Could Be Accomplished by One Big Body Than by Many Small Ones.

Alfred Reeves, general manager of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' association, advanced the suggestion recently that all of the good roads or highway committees of the different sport and trade automobiling organizations be consolidated, says the New York Sun. He thinks that if all the various committees be brought together in one big committee the work of rousing good roads sentiment in the United States would make much faster progress than is possible under existing conditions, when of necessity so much ground is covered by several committees. Not only does he think such a body could and would command more attention at Washington from congress than would be possible for any of the present committees, but it is his firm belief that such a plan would prove more economical and far more effective than any other.

He points out that there are six motoring organizations alone which have committees working for good roads, these bodies being called good roads committees in some cases and highway committees in others, but in all cases their purpose is the increase in the number of miles of improved highways in the United States.

While these committees have done good work and can keep on doing it, Mr. Reeves thinks that more could be accomplished if they were consolidated, as expenses would be reduced, and it cannot be disputed that a delegation representing these six organizations could do more effective work in securing favorable legislation at Washington, for instance, than could be done by delegations from each of the six bodies.

A consolidation would also be advisable, because an executive board of half a dozen members could be readily selected made up of men thoroughly posted on the subject who had gained their knowledge after years of experience. By following out this plan it would be a far simpler matter to secure men able to give some of their time to the work than it is to pick out such a committee from any one of the organizations named. Under present conditions such committees are frequently composed of men living in widely separated parts of the country who of course are unable to hold frequent enough meetings to properly handle the work they are trying to do.

It is not Mr. Reeves' idea that only the six motoring organizations named should combine forces, but that all national organizations of road users should be included. He would include the big associations of farmers in different parts of the country and also the good roads workers who recently had a convention at Oklahoma, as well as any other big organization which has appointed a committee to advance the cause of improved highways. He thinks it a very necessary point for the fullest success of such a plan that the farmers be invited to participate, as their influence would count so heavily in the matter of securing favorable legislation, both national and state.

As an evidence of what may be accomplished by consolidation, even on a small scale, Mr. Reeves cites the case of the Highway Improvement association, which was formed in New York a few years ago.

It was made up of the Road Drivers' association, the Associated Cycling Clubs of New York, the Truck Owners' association and the Automobile Club of America. There was one delegate from each organization, and they were able to do a great deal of effective work.

They secured the laying of asphalt strips along many poorly paved or rough streets and put an end to the unnecessarily lavish sprinkling of streets, in addition to doing a great deal of other good work. Mr. Reeves thinks that this same idea could be followed out in national road affairs with correspondingly greater results.

Bad Roads Did It.

A farmer old, so we've been told,
With a team of horses strong
Drove down the road with a heavy load,
While singing his merry song,
But his mirth in song was not so long,
For his horses gave a leap,
As he ran amuck in the mud he stuck,
Clear up to his axles deep.
Bad roads did it!

And a wheelman gay went out one day
For a joyful morning spin;
With the weather bright, his heart was light
As he left the country inn.
But he went not far when he felt a jar
Which started his troubles and cares.
He was laid up ill, while the doctor's bill
Came in with the one for repairs.
Bad roads did it!

In an automobile of wood and steel
A millionaire prim and neat
Went out for a ride by the river's side
In a style that was hard to beat,
But, alas, he found that the broken ground
And the ruts and the holes so great
Had smashed a wheel of his automobile—
What he said we cannot relate.
Bad roads did it!

But we're glad to say there shines a ray
Of hope that will right this wrong
When in every state they will legislate
To help the good roads along.
So the man with his wheel or automobile
Will never again get blues,
And the farmer with smiles will travel for miles
On a road that is fit to use.
Good roads will do it.

GOOD WORK

Done Daily in Dallas.

Nearly every reader has heard of Doan's Kidney Pills. Their good work still continues, and our citizens are constantly adding endorsement by public testimony. No better proof of merit can be had than the experience of friends and neighbors. Read this case:

Mrs. N. Swaggert, of 819 Garden St., Pendleton, Ore., says: "Both my husband and myself have used Doan's Kidney Pills with most gratifying results. Mr. Swaggert was troubled quite severely with his back and kidneys for a long time, and nothing ever helped him as Doan's Kidney Pills have. I have known of the healing and curative power of this remedy for some time, and found that a few doses would quickly remove any lameness or pain in the back caused by kidney derangement. I am glad to help make Doan's Kidney Pills better known to all afflicted with backache or kidney trouble."
