

Notice for Publication.

TIMBER LAND, ACT JUNE 3, 1878. United States Land Office, Portland, Oregon, June 12, 1907. Notice is hereby given that in compliance with the provisions of the act of Congress of June 3, 1878, entitled "An act for the sale of timber lands in the States of California, Oregon, Nevada, and Washington Territory," as extended to the Public Land States by act of August 4, 1892, William W. Chappell, of Falls City, Oregon, State of Oregon, has this day filed in this office his sworn statement No. 7488, for the purchase of the N. 1/4 of the S. W. 1/4 Section No. 16, in Township No. 8 S., of Range No. 8 W., and will offer proof to show that the land sought is more valuable for its timber or stone than for agricultural purposes, and to establish his claim to said land before the Register and Receiver of this office, at Portland, Oregon, on Friday, the 28th day of September, 1907. He names as witnesses: William J. Southwell, of Falls City, Oregon; Roy McMurphy, of Falls City, Oregon; George Bagley, of Portland, Oregon; F. A. Lucas, of Falls City, Oregon; C. Kramer, of Falls City, Oregon. Any and all persons claiming adversely the above-described lands are requested to file their claims in this office on or before said day of September, 1907. ALGERNON S. DRESSER, Register.

Silage as a Horse Feed.

I know silage is a good feed for horses, for I have tried it. I have not, however, fed to any great extent, because I did not have as much silage as I wanted for cows and horses both. I thought more of my cows than I did of my horses, so the cows had all they needed and the horses had to go short. One winter we had a brood mare that was fed silage all winter, probably twenty pounds a day. She had some hay and straw to go with it and no grain except what was in the silage, and she came out fat and with a glossy coat in the spring and had a fine, healthy colt. Horses like silage as well as cattle do after they get accustomed to it. A man in Michigan a few years ago wintered 200 horses on silage and straw exclusively, with no grain. The Ohio experiment station tried feeding horses on silage through the winter and reported that they came through until spring in the best condition. W. C. Bradley of Hudson, Wis., says that one year during spring work he was out of hay and the only coarse fodder his horses had during all that period of hard work was silage. He says that his horses never stood work better.—C. F. McKerrrow in Spirit of the West.

A more intimate acquaintance with hog cholera, coupled with an illuminated common sense, points to the necessity of establishing a quarantine in case of an infected pen, just as is done with an outbreak of smallpox or diphtheria in the human species. Careful observations by specialists in this disease lead them to believe that the contagion is as often carried from one place to another in the neighborhood by the boots of the farm proprietor or the wheels of his vehicles as in any other manner. Care along the lines suggested would prevent without question ten prevent heavy losses from this destructive and baffling malady.

ROAD WORK IN TEXAS

Value of a Co-operative Plan For Improving Highways.

GREAT BENEFITS DERIVED.

Community Clubs Formed—How a Little Stretch of Road Built by Business Men of Denison and Farmers Has Proved a Great Educator.

Denison, a thriving Texas town, is setting a splendid pace in road improvement through a co-operative plan that is exciting much comment throughout the state and that in some sections is being followed with fine effect, says W. W. Anderson in the Good Roads Magazine. Some months ago the Denison board of trade found that while Denison was progressing as a railroad and industrial center its volume of country trade had not increased with its population and other development. An investigation revealed that the cause was its lack of good roads. The county authorities were appealed to in vain, the road fund being entirely inadequate to the demands for maintaining the bridges and making minor repairs on the hundreds of miles of road in the county. The county convicts form a road crew for each of the four commissioners' precincts, but they get over the roads with the grading outfit only once every six or seven years. No permanent improvements could be undertaken, and through lack of individual interest on the part of the roads after they were graded, and they soon went down. Denison determined to do something, and what she has since accomplished has worked wonders for the city and has won the commendation of thinking people throughout the state. T. W. Larkin, secretary of the board of trade, proposed a co-operative plan through which the business men of Denison and the farmers should work together to assist the county authorities in making substantial improvements. Secretary Larkin went out among the farmers, attended and addressed meetings held at country schoolhouses, presented his proposition and organized community good roads clubs. These clubs appointed committees to solicit subscriptions from the farmers and gave them the privilege of working out on the road the amount subscribed, $3 per day being allowed for team and driver. A cash fund was raised in the city and was used in constructing substantial stone culverts and in paying for engineering and other skilled work. The county authorities were asked to put a crew on the road and render such assistance as was possible. This was done, and in a little while work was well under way on what is known as the Denton and Carpenters' Bluff road. The road improved.

A TEXAS SPLIT LOG BRAG.

Though one of the most traveled, this was notorious as one of the worst roads in the country. It has now been made as good as an earth road can be made. It is well graded and well drained, and its stone culverts are the first ever constructed on a public road in the county. As may be expected, the benefits already derived by Denison and community have been very great, but perhaps the greatest good has come through the inspiration that has spread throughout the state. This one little stretch of road has been a great educator. It has demonstrated the value of good roads in a most impressive way. The enthusiasm of the farmers and the business men of the city at once aroused other communities, and other clubs were formed to take up the work on their respective roads as rapidly as they could be reached. The same plan is being employed on another road out of Denison, and as soon as it is completed another will be taken up.

Merchants say that the volume of trade from the community penetrated by the Carpenters' Bluff road has been doubled this season. Farmers say the cost of placing their produce on the Denison market has been reduced one-half, to say nothing of the increased comfort and convenience of the travel. These glowing statements spread rapidly. The newspapers of the state are making the most of the ammunition thus furnished and are firing hot shot of good roads gospel that is reaching the people. Columns of newspaper space have been devoted to the Denison co-operative road building plan, and it is regarded as a great stride toward the establishment of a more effective road system in Texas.

It may be stated in conclusion that these roads are being well cared for. The split log drag has been employed with excellent effect. The improved roads are divided into mile sections, each section being placed in charge of some farmer, who, with the assistance of his neighbors, operates the drag after each rain. The drag is a great device for dirt roads. It does some of the work of filling the ruts and holes and keeping soft dirt surfaces to the center without disturbing the travel packed surface.

When to Cease Inbreeding. Cockerels and pullets of the same hatch may be mated with good results. Inbreeding can be done for a year or two without any danger, but new blood should be added from time to time.

When to Caponize. Caponizing should be done when the chickens are three to four months old. They should be marketed as soon as the size and weight are obtained.

THE YOUNG CHICKS.

Some Valuable Suggestions as to the Care of the Little Fellows.

When the chicks are thirty or forty hours old they are carried in warm covered baskets to the brooders, and fifty or sixty are put under each cover, where the temperature is between 95 and 100 degrees, says a writer, speaking from experience, in Inland Poultry Journal. The temperature is not allowed to fall below 95 degrees the first week or 90 during the second week. Then it is gradually reduced according to the temperature outside, care being taken not to drive the chicks out by too much heat or to cause them to crowd together under the hover because they are cold. They should be fed out separately when young and a little later let with their heads just at the edge of the fringe of the hover.

Under no condition are they allowed to huddle outside of the brooder. They huddle because they are cold, and they should be put under the hover to get warm until they learn to do so of their own accord. Neither are they allowed to stay under the hover too much, but are forced out into the cooler air, where they gain strength in the daytime. They are not allowed to get more than a foot from the hover during the first two days; then a little farther away each day and down on to the house floor about the fourth or fifth day, if the weather is not too cold. They must not get cold enough to huddle or cry, but they must come out from under the hover frequently.

The floor of the brooder is cleaned every day and kept well sprinkled with sharp, fine crushed rock, known in the market as "chick grit." The floor of the house is covered with clover leaves or hay chaff from the feeding floor of the cattle barns.

For raising great numbers of winter chickens the long piped brooder house is indispensable, and it has many advantages when used at any season of the year. The advantages are especially great when raising chickens in April or May prove to be cold and wet, for then the small houses are apt to be cold outside of the brooders.

The expenditure is greater for the piped houses for the reason that colony houses should be provided in which the chickens may be sheltered after they leave the brooder house. In ordinary seasons we experience no difficulty in raising April and May hatched chicks in the small houses. With proper feeding, pullets hatched in these months are early enough to do good work throughout the year.

Salt Cat For Pigeons. Some persons make use of rock salt for their pigeons; others table salt. The writer (in the Feather) never used anything other than a piece of salt codfish nailed to a board and hung against the wall so that the pigeons reached it. Many differ with us as to the use of this, but we never had any ailments in our loft after we had cleaned out the diseased specimens, quit the use of salt of any kind, provided perfectly dry interior and used the codfish for salt. Personally we believe that the eating of rock salt, table salt or salt of any kind by pigeons causes throat trouble. Eating the codfish, which is sparingly done, provides meat and salt as well.

Convenient "Droppings Board." Instead of a solid platform or "droppings board" beneath the roosts use two fairly wide boards in front of and behind the roost. They will catch practically all the droppings, and each board can be carried out and emptied when desired; or a basket can be placed on the floor directly beneath the opening between the boards and with a hoe the droppings on one board can be shoveled off into the basket and pulled forward into it from the other. Having but two boards, and these loose, makes it easier to guard against vermin.

Two Story Henhouses. Most two story poultry houses are not used as it was planned they should be, says a writer in Farm-Poultry. On a small lot the yard room is more of a problem than house room. A two story house might be an advantage in winter, but in summer the number of fowls kept would more likely have to be according to yard capacity. Generally in a two story house one story is inconvenient. Sometimes both are. Common experience favors the one story house.

The Silver Laced Wyandotte. The Silver Laced Wyandotte is the original Wyandotte, the pioneer of the breed. The males have breast feathers of white, laced or bordered with strong black feathers. This is also the plumage of the female in back, wings and breast. The Silver Penciled female has plumage patterned after the Dark Brahma, with penciling of silver gray and black following the shape of the feather alternately.

GOOD WORK

Done Daily in Dallas.

Nearly every reader has heard of Doan's Kidney Pills. Their good work all continue, and our citizens are constantly adding endorsement by public testimony. No better proof of merit can be had than the experience of friends and neighbors. Read this case: Mrs. N. Swaggert, of 819 Garden St., Pendleton, Ore., says: "Both my husband and myself have used Doan's Kidney Pills with most gratifying results. Mr. Swaggert was troubled quite severely with his back and kidneys for a long time, and nothing ever helped him as Doan's Kidney Pills have. I have known of the healing and curative power of this remedy for some time, and found that a few doses would quickly remove any lameness or pain in the back caused by kidney derangement. I am glad to help make Doan's Kidney Pills better known to all afflicted with backache or kidney trouble."
