The bridge across the Willamette is being treated to a much needed coat of paint and will present a much nicer appearance hereafter. Contractor Bort, with a force of men is doing the work and says that it was high time that the steel work on the bridge was painted. Mr. Bort says that the steel work was in a very bad condition and that it took twice the time to clean off the rust and old paint than it will to apply the new coat. SKATING RINK WILL OPEN

Good Music and Plenty of Skates Will Be Provided For Saturday Night.

Those who bow down at the shrine of the roller skate may not forget the disconsolate and skateless season of the summer, for the Colosseum Rink will open again for its winter season, Saturday evening. Messrs. Kerslake & White have spared no pains to put the floor in first-class condition, and Stockwell's band will furnish the music which adds so much pleasure to the sport of skating.

Mr. Kerslake tried to complete arrangements for the installation of an electric organ, but has as yet been unable to secure any definite promise from the Portland firm. However they are unwilling for their patrons to wait longer and will open their rink immediately. The rink will not be open every evening at present, but later on there will be skating sessions nightly.

A new shipment of skates precludes the possibility of the supply running out. The Colosseum is the first of the valley rinks to open its doors for the coming season.

At a late hour the guests departed for their homes, after wishing Mr. Wheeler many more enjoyable birthdays.—Falls City News.
