

CURE YOUR KIDNEYS

Why will people continue to suffer the agonies of kidney complaint, backache, urinary disorders, lameness, headaches, languor, Why allow themselves to become chronic invalids, when a certain cure is offered them?

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use, because it gives to the kidneys the help they need to perform their work.

If you have any, even one, of the symptoms of kidney disease, cure your self now, before diabetes, dropsy or Bright's disease sets in.

Mrs. L. Hodson, of 717 Aura St., Pendleton, Ore., says: "I just as enthusiastically endorse Doan's Kidney Pills today as I did nearly three years ago. They relieved me of kidney trouble which had bothered me for a considerable time. There was aching pains across the small of my back and down through my kidneys, which were aggravated by colds which settled in the back and loins and caused an awful lameness. This was my condition when I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. This remedy banished the backache and pains through the loins, regulated the kidney secretions and removed every symptom of the trouble. From that day to this there has been no recurrence, and I give Doan's Kidney Pills all the credit. I consider them to be the best kidney remedy procurable and recommend them whenever the occasion arises."

TWO GREAT CORN PESTS.

In his little book entitled the "A B C of Corn Culture" Professor Holden, the corn expert, classifies the corn root worm and the corn root louse as the two greatest enemies of the corn plant. He estimates that the damage to the crop in the corn belt alone from the first pest is not less than 200,000,000 bushels annually. The loss is so serious as to invite the attention of all corn growers. Mr. Holden states that out of 600 fields which he examined in Iowa, Illinois, Kansas and Missouri over 400 were more or less injured by the corn root worm. One reason for the general ignorance that seems to prevail touching the damage of this pest is that it works entirely underground and gradually. The eggs, which are laid by a little grass colored beetle along in August and September, hatch in the following June and early July. As soon as they are hatched the worms enter the roots and burrow back and forth lengthwise through the roots and just beneath the outside covering. As high as 200 of these worms have been found in a single hill of corn. The roots attacked rot; the stalks lose their vitality and break over easily or fire in the August weather. A heavy wind storm is likely to prostrate an entire field. The corn root worm is likely to infest any field which has grown corn more than two years in succession, and the only remedy is to put the infested land into some other crop, preferably clover, for a period of two years. In other words, damage from this pest is practically nothing on farms where an intelligent system of crop rotation is in vogue. Ravages by the worm are simply a protest against an agricultural system that is wrong in both theory and practice.

Next to the corn root worm the worst enemy the corn plant has to contend with is the corn root louse or aphid. They are smaller than the head of a pin, bluish green in color and appear in clusters on the roots of the corn early in the spring. They are always associated with ants, which act as their guardians, protecting them and carrying them to the roots of the corn. When disturbed by the ants they exude from their honey tubes a sweetish substance, called "honey dew," on which the ants feed. The damage from the corn root louse is done largely while the plant is young and immature and its roots are juicy and tender, it being the juice in the root that the lice feed upon. When a field has suffered from the lice, damage the following season may be greatly decreased by cultivating and harrowing the field thoroughly before the corn comes up and giving it frequent cultivation afterward. This not only disturbs the work of the ants, but hastens the growth of the corn. As in the case of the corn root worm, the best preventive of damage from the lice is a system of crop rotation, which does not allow them to get a foothold in the soil. Experiments conducted by Professor Forbes of the Illinois experiment station showed that the damage by the lice could be greatly lessened by treating the seed before planting with a solution made by mixing one part of oil of lemon with nine parts of wood alcohol, using three ounces of the solution to a gallon of seed. He found that the ants would keep away from corn thus treated. After six weeks treated rows had one-fifth as many aphides as the untreated, while at the end of ten weeks the treated hills of corn stood 74 per cent higher than those untreated. In the case of both of these pests as well as other enemies of the corn plant damage seems to be reduced to a minimum under a system of crop rotation, which not only is the best thing for the soil but produces the largest crops as well.

EXPERIMENTAL SEED PLOT.

Every farmer should have an experimental seed plot on his own farm. For his corn this should be a detached field or a plot at one side of his main field, where he should plant corn from the best ears he has saved. The effectiveness of such an experimental corn plot can be greatly increased if he will go through this corn just before the pollen begins to shed and cut the tassel off every stock which does not give promise of producing a thrifty ear. This will effectively prevent ears produced on thrifty stalks being fertilized by pollen from weak or worthless ones. Enough seed corn ought to be secured from such a plot to plant the entire corn acreage the succeeding season. Such experimentation is carried on by many farmers and should be followed by many more. The saving of seed in such manner for several years ought to increase the yield of corn from the farm as a whole many bushels per acre.

HANDLING THE CORN.

Experiments conducted on a number of Minnesota farms last year under the direction of the state experiment station with a view to determining the cost of producing the different kinds of farm crops show that the most economical handling of the corn crop consists in planting thickly a relatively small portion of the farm area for fodder purposes, husking the main crop in the field and pasturing off the stalks. The shredding of corn stover was found to be a costly practice and only justifiable when the hay crop is short or badly damaged. While Minnesota is outside the limits of the corn belt, it is likely that the findings would be applicable to quite a portion of the strictly corn growing territory, in which hay would not fetch better than $7 a ton.
