DEATH ENDS SUFFERING

John Craven Passes Away After Long Illness Caused by Stomach Trouble.

John Craven died at his home near the mouth of the Little Nestucca river, Saturday, after an illness of nearly a year, his death being caused by stomach trouble. His brother, R. C. Craven, was summoned from Dallas, Thursday afternoon, but was not able to reach his home until a short time after his death.

Mr. Craven was well known in Dallas and neighboring cities, having been a resident of Polk county for over 21 years. He was born in Ray county, Missouri, in 1847 and crossed the plains to Oregon in 1865, settling in Polk county where he made his home until 1886. He then moved to the coast, where he resided until the time of his death.

He was twice married, and is survived by seven children, the eldest of whom, Will Craven, now resides in Independence. The deceased was a brother of R. C. Craven, of Dallas, Joe Craven, of Monmouth, and W. R. Craven, of Salmon River.

CLOSING WEEK AT COLLEGE

Dallas Students Celebrate Successful Year With Appropriate Programs.

Just at this time the students of Dallas College are in the midst of the celebrations that mark the close of the college year of 1907 and '08, a year of exceptional success in every line of work.

The festivities of the commencement week were opened with the third annual program of the Utopian Literary Society, Friday night. The old rivalry between the societies of the young men and the young women of the college ran as high as ever before, and the Utopians spared no pains to make their entertainment a success. Every detail, from the least of the stage decorations to the most important portion of the program itself, was given the most careful attention. Those who were present admit that the program was by far the best in point of literary excellence, and completeness of preparation, that the young women's society has ever given.

The Philadelphian Society followed with its annual entertainment on Saturday night, and apparently the two societies still stand on about equal footing, dividing honors for their skill in preparing and rendering programs. After this program, the members of the Philadelphian Society, the members of the Faculty and other invited guests, mostly from the Utopian Society, went to the Dallas Hotel where the young men had had their regular annual banquet prepared.

The Philadelphian banquet has, since it was first instituted, been regarded as one of the social events of the college year, and Saturday night's banquet was fully up to the established standard of excellence. Several toasts and speeches by members of the society and the faculty closed the evening's entertainment.

Sunday morning Dr. C. A. Mock preached the Baccalaureate sermon, delivering an address full of helpful and practical thought. At 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon, the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. held their farewell meeting, and in the evening, Miss Hutchinson, of the Portland Y. W. C. A., delivered the regular annual address before the Christian Associations in the Evangelical church.

P. H. D'Arcy, of Salem, delivered the annual address before the literary societies last night on the subject of "The Value of Work in Literary Societies to the Student." A large crowd attended the lecture, which was appreciated by all.

The class of '08 will hold its class day program this afternoon, and Professor W. T. Caldwell's music students will give their annual recital tonight. The entertainments of the week will be closed tomorrow with the graduation exercises in the morning, and the reunion of the alumni of Dallas College, LaCreole Academy and Lafayette Seminary at the Woodman Hall in the evening.
