STOCKING UP THE LARDER
WISE TALKS BY U. S. LOUGHARY'S OFFICE BOY

I was glad that Pres. Roosevelt said we had the finest navy in the world, because every one knows he must have referred to the quality of our battleships and cruisers and the men behind the guns. I believe the boss must know something about ships, because yesterday when everybody was busy, in comes a fellow with an awfully fine-looking girl. It might have been his sister, but he certainly did not treat her that way. Anyhow, they wanted to buy a stock of groceries. I thought it was a shame to see them waiting around for some one to get through, so I butted in and showed them some of the goods that caught my eye. I was dishing out some gush that did not seem to set well on the lady's constitution and they were about to give me the high sign, when the boss came up. I was awfully glad he did, because he sold 'em a big bill of goods and they paid the cash for it. After a while the boss came up to me and said, "Willie, aft is the place for you; don't mingle with the cabin passengers again." It made me sort of seasick all right.
