"JACK" McDONALD DEAD

Succumbs to Erysipelas in Portland, Wednesday—Funeral at Beaverton Today.

A message was received from Portland, Wednesday, announcing the death of J. D. McDonald, the well-known timber cruiser, and requesting the Woodmen of Dallas, in which lodge the deceased was for many years a member, to come to Portland and take charge of the remains. Mr. McDonald's death was comparatively sudden and was due to a severe attack of erysipelas.

The deceased was about 40 years of age and was a resident of Dallas until about four months ago, when he moved with his family to Beaverton. He is survived by a wife and three children. Mr. McDonald was a native of Wisconsin coming to Oregon about twelve years ago, and making his home in Dallas. Perfectly familiar with the mountains, he was one of the most skillful timber cruisers in the state, and it is doubtful if there is a man living who is more intimately acquainted with every foot of the timber land in the Siletz Basin, than he. He was a man of many sterling qualities, actuated always by the most high impulses, and the death of "Jack" McDonald will be sincerely regretted by his many friends.

He will be buried at Beaverton today under the auspices of the Woodmen of that city, to which lodge he transferred his membership from Dallas.

The Rev. C. P. Cox announces his subjects for the services at the Baptist Church as follows: Morning, "The Lonely Laborer;" evening, "The Secret of Paul's Success."

Mrs. S. H. Tetherow, of Falls City, came to Dallas yesterday morning to care for her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Frank Holman, who was injured in a runaway Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Evelyn Byrd and three children left for their home in Burns, Harney county, Wednesday, after an extended visit at the home of their aunts, Mrs. D. C. Crider and Mrs. F. J. Coad.

U. W. Beeman, a former resident of Dallas, has moved with his family from Pendleton, to make his home in this city. He will be employed in the hardware store of William Faulk.

Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Stowe, who have been visiting their sons in this city, returned to McMinville, Wednesday. They have sold their property in that city and will return to Dallas next week to reside.

A wire spark screen has been placed on the smoke stack of the city road roller, insuring the wooden buildings in the business portions of the city against the possibility of catching fire from stray sparks from the engine.

Max Crandall, of Hillsboro, finished experting the books in the various departments of Polk county's courthouse Tuesday and left for Tillamook yesterday where he expects to be busy on the books of that county for about three weeks.

The bins for the county rock crusher at the quarry near Salt Creek have been completed and an expert arrived from Portland last night, who will set up the crusher at once. It will probably be ready for operation by the first of next week.

W. V. Fuller, returned to Dallas, Wednesday evening from a business trip in Southern Oregon, but was summoned to Portland yesterday morning by the news of the sudden death of J. D. McDonald in that city.

T. J. Cherrington will close his photograph gallery and leave next Tuesday for a month's vacation, during which he will take a short fishing trip on the Santiam river, a visit to Collins' Springs and a few weeks' at Newport. He will return to Dallas about August 15.

A Card From the Cherry Fair.

W. R. Palmer, who is attending the Salem Cherry Fair writes that the location of the exhibits at the opening of the fair yesterday was a scene of great activity and that representatives from all parts of Polk and Marion counties especially, were present, while people from all of the other fruit raising counties of Oregon, were also in attendance. Better packing and more care in arranging, resulting from past years' experience, he says, makes the exhibit far superior than that of the previous year. The tents of the National Guard, who are also in Salem this week, are pitched in a model camp on the fine rifle range lying in Polk county just west of the big steel bridge. About 150 riflemen are present and the target practice for the state militia will begin today.
