MAKING THE DAIRY PAY.

It is generally conceded, says N. A. Clapp, the prominent Michigan dairyman, that the average cow will eat about $40 worth of feed each year. If the herd has not produced 200 pounds of butter per cow that will sell for an average of 20 cents per pound they have certainly not all paid expenses. Most of us know which are the good cows and which are the poor ones. If we are not certain about the quality of the milk as regards butter fat produced by each cow it is an easy matter to test them and know. The weeding out process may seem like a severe ordeal, but it must be done before the farm dairy is made a paying proposition. It does not pay to keep a poor cow to eat and make manure to keep up the fertility of the soil when a good producing cow will do that part just as well and at the same time will pay for her keep and the labor bestowed in caring for her and return a profit besides.

Gate For Dairy Stables.
A dairyman says he has seen many kinds of gates used to prevent stock from going where they are not wanted, but considers the one shown in the illustration by far the best.

SLIDING GATE FOR STABLE.

Instead of swinging upward and being hooked to the ceiling or a jolt overhead, as some do, it slides back and forth upon a length of gas pipe serving as a track, by means of iron straps attached to the long pieces that compose the outer ends of the gate. The gas pipe should be at least two inches through and in length twice the width of the gate. The gate should be made to fit the place where needed and can be constructed of any strong, light lumber. If the feed room is in easy reach of the stable the alley leading to it should by all means be protected by one of these gates. In case of a cow getting loose in the night, as cows frequently will, it might be the means of saving her life from eating too much grain.

Feeding the Herd.
L. P. Bailey, president of the Ohio board of agriculture, says his practice of feeding the milking herd is as follows: Grain at 4:45 a. m. Begin milking at 5:30. After milking feed all the silage the cows will eat up clean, usually about fifteen or twenty pounds. At 10 a. m., if weather is not stormy or too cold, the cows are all turned out to water and the stables freed from all animals. If weather is favorable they remain out until 3 p. m., when they are put back in the stable, and each cow is given about one pound of grain. This is merely a bait to make them come into the stable and remain in their stalls until they can be fastened. They are then given as much hay, preferably clover, as they will eat without waste. Begin milking at 5 p. m. After milking we feed silage with grain mixed with it. The stables are then closed for the night. For grain feed we use dried brewers' grain, gluten feed, molasses grain, wheat bran, corn and oats meal, cottonseed and oil meal. We never use all these feeds at once, but vary according to price and need. We aim to make a balanced ration as near as possible. I have been using silage for fifteen years. I use round silos, with wooden hoops inside and outside 2 by 1 inch studding. They are lined on the inside with good pine flooring.

Rearing Dairy Stock.
It should ever be remembered that heifers are being reared for the dairy and not for beef. For this purpose they should be fed and cared for. There should be a good, healthy growth of muscle and bone, but not of fat. Begin with the calf and follow up until the heifers become cows. There should be a steady growth of body and development of dairy form qualities all of the time, summer and winter. The young animals should be kindly treated, so that they may become quiet and docile. This is the more necessary as the heifers usually take their place in the dairy at the early age of two years. There should be plenty of succulent, nourishing foods, but no overfeeding, as this is an injury to them rather than a benefit.

The Cow and Her Care.
To do well cows must be made comfortable. To be a profitable milker the cow must be a hearty eater with good digestive powers. In milking get all the milk each time, but do not keep on stripping after you have got it. Never use wooden milk pails. According to statistics, the average cow produces only 130 pounds of butter in a year. Never choose a dairy cow because she is fat, sleek and a beauty. The profitable animal is generally scraggy and bony. Sunlight should be utilized as much as possible in a dairy. It is a germ destroyer.

STORING VEGETABLES.
The Best Way to Keep Them in Winter.
It requires care and a knowledge of the nature of vegetables in order to successfully keep them through the late fall and winter. They must, as a rule, be kept in a cool atmosphere, but not cool enough to freeze. But pumpkin and squash need a dry, warm air and in gathering must be carefully handled. It is best to leave the stem long, and never store squashes until ripe. Potatoes do best in a cellar that is cool and damp and should be kept in the dark as much as possible, but there should be an arrangement for a good circulation of air. Barrels or boxes are best for carrots, parsnips, beets and turnips. After storing in these receptacles sand or fine soil should be placed on top, allowing it to run down between the roots. The soil should be shaken down so as to fill all the spaces. In harvesting the vegetables must be carefully handled and the tops cut off an inch or more from the top. This will prevent a decay from close cutting. If beets are cut too close they will bleed, losing their sweet flavor, and quickly spoil. Onions should be perfectly dried as soon as gathered and not allowed in a damp place. If kept in a dry room where the thermometer is rarely above freezing they will keep well. Cabbage placed in a barrel and sunk in the ground and so arranged that moisture cannot enter and then thickly covered with straw and earth will keep nicely till far into spring. But where it is intended to be used during the winter a good plan is to cut off the stems and outer leaves, trim the heads as much as if preparing to cook and then wrap each head separately in several thicknesses of news paper. This will exclude the air. After lining a barrel with paper pack the wrapped heads closely in it and after it is in cover with paper. The barrel must be kept in the coolest part of the cellar. Dampness will not harm the keeping qualities. To keep tomatoes pick the largest specimens that have begun to show color as soon as the vines are cut by frost, but before the fruit is frosted. Handle carefully to prevent bruising. Wrap each tomato separately in soft paper and place in shallow boxes or on a shelf one layer deep. Keep in a cool place, secure from frost, so as to prevent ripening. If a few are brought out at a time and placed in a warm place they will quickly ripen. They can thus be kept for several weeks after killing frosts. An occasional turning under of the whole crop is one of the best paying methods of farming.

Worth Remembering.
As a traveler passes through any country he judges the prosperity of the farmer chiefly by the appearance of his buildings and farmyards. He can get some line on conditions by looking at crops in the field or cattle in the pasture, but the story is told most fully and accurately by the paint on the barn and the lava grass in front of the house. And when the real estate agent takes a prospective buyer through the country he depends largely, almost chiefly, on the grounds and buildings to set the price on every farm. These considerations of themselves should urge all farmers to the improvement of their premises. But there are other reasons even more powerful to influence thoughtful men and women in the same direction. Most important is the fact that this is home. It is the place where father, mother and children live. The family life centers here. If there is to be any home feeling it must come through a thoughtful care for the comforts, conveniences and beauties of the home. If there is to be any uplift in intelligence or morality it must find its opportunity in wholesome and attractive surroundings. One of the greatest differences between a farm and any other enterprise is that the farm is both a business and a dwelling place. Many things which a man would not care to undertake for the benefit of his business merely he must put through for the sake of his home. This has ever been the spirit of American farm life at its best, and it needs to be preached on every hand today.

MULEFOOT HOGS.
What a Kansas Breeder Has to Say About Them.
Breeder of swine in many sections of the country are greatly interested in mulefoot hogs, and these animals have attracted considerable attention in recent years when exhibited at the state fairs. These hogs are now being improved and bred under the name of Ozark hogs. A Kansas breeder, Dr. W. J. Connor, who is raising them, says that, while in a measure they are a new thing, yet he has been breeding them long enough to have ascertained that they are actually the best range hogs in existence today. He has found, he says, that they will live and prosper where a common hog would starve to death. The meat of these hogs, he declares, is sweeter than that of common hogs, and there is a larger proportion of lean to fat. They may be finished at any age, and it is possible to bring them to a weight of from 500 to 800 pounds. It seems that these hogs have been tried out in practically every state in the Union, and Dr. Connor says that they have never had cholera.

FOOT OF MULEFOOT HOG.

Notes For the Shepherd.
If the pastures are short and dry look out for the breeding ewes, says the Farm Journal. Give them extra feed—grain in a feed box, fodder corn or freshly cut clover. After the roots are gathered for winter the flock should feed over the field to clean up the small roots, etc. It is well to reserve a patch of turnips for the sheep to feed on. It may be in one corner of a pasture. A patch of one acre will furnish feed for twenty-five or thirty sheep for three months. Do not attempt to winter old ewes. Fatten them quickly on turnips, oil-meal, ground corn and oats. Sweet corn in the milk, fed stalks and all, is also a quick fatterer for old ewes. Do not breed young ewes under fourteen months old unless very growthy. Keep the sheep dry. Never leave them out in a cold rain, especially in the fall. If you have no good shelter in the pastures it will pay to make one. Make it deep, but provide for ventilation without drafts. Keep It in the Bottle. Bottled milk, being sealed with a cap, cannot absorb odors and should be left in the bottle until used, not emptied into an open dish.
