AMATEUR NIGHT AT STAR

Manager of Moving Picture Theater Will Introduce Novelty Into Programs.

On Thursday night, April 8, the management of the Star Theater will introduce into its entertainment a new feature—the "amateur night." At that time amateurs who lay claim to skill in any of the branches of the histrionic art will be given an opportunity to test their skill before an audience and the result will no doubt be a program which it will be well worth the while of anyone seeking amusement and entertainment to witness.

As an incentive to the amateur performers, prizes have been offered, which will be awarded according to the amount of applause the particular "stunt" of the performer may evoke. The one gaining the most applause will receive $5, a prize of $3 for the one coming second will be awarded and the winner of the third place will be given $2. The rating of the applause accorded to each performer will be left in the hands of three disinterested judges.

The intention is to bring out the best talent and to secure the greatest variety of features possible, so the "amateur night" will furnish an ideal opportunity for all who may have hitherto unsatisfied yearnings for the stage. The embryo operatic star, the undiscovered rival of Hermann, the wizard, the developing clog dancer or the amateur acrobat may all have a show to prove their worth. Those desiring to learn complete particulars concerning the new entertainment feature, or those desiring to take part in the show should communicate with Clarence Whiteside, manager of the Star Theater, before next Tuesday so that a place may be arranged for them on the program.

Flurry in Front Street.

A Portland commission house, the Southern Oregon Commission Company offers to give to any shipper the name of any customer to whom his produce was sold, so the customer can find out exactly what price was received. The company also gives access to its books so the shipper can ascertain for himself just what returns he is entitled to. This is a radical change from the traditional policy of secrecy heretofore followed by the Front Street Commission men and the advertisement of this new offer has created quite a stir.

The batteries selected are Floyd Myer and Doty, pitchers; Charles Boydston and Ned Shaw, catchers.
