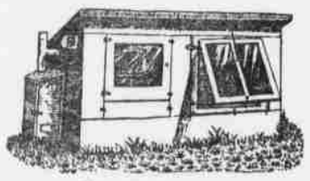
A DEPENDABLE BROODER.

If not too tight to buy right and you wish to save crying from chicks dying, beware of brooder bargain buying. Hatching chicks is often easy, but brooding chicks to early and perfect maturity is not, and the best brooding apparatus is none too good when it concerns the development of life and your success or failure. Therefore when you invest buy the best.

We present the picture of our style brooder that stands about even with



BROODER EXTERIOR

Biddy in rearing the largest average of finely matured birds for nest and show.

Much different from the dark brooder with leaky trapdoor roof which lets out the heat and lets in the rain when raised to view thermometer and chicks and often cuts off the head of some venturesome bird that tried to escape. This brooder is well aired and lighted, the thermometer and chicks are in view, and to clean you simply remove board under nursery door, open the double door and scrape the level floor.

The lamp box is convenient to attend lamp; the flame is in view; the lamp and box are never overheated, as surplus heat passes through a screen into nursery.

The interior is divided by a movable partition (9) into nursery (1) and sun parlor (10) or scratch floor.

Thus the house has two temperatures, and the one level floor makes it easy to heat and clean, and chicks are not crippled by falling down steps.

The hover (2) and partition (9) can be easily removed to make a first class roost coop.

Heat is applied by a lamp which fits into a hood in the lamp box (7) and passes through pipe (4) into a doughnut shaped radiator in top of hover (2), while smoke passes through pipe (5) to chimney (6), which rests on top of lamp box.

Hence there is no smoke inside, no hot floors to lame chicks, no hot drum under hover to roast them and make them crowd.

The hover (twenty-two inches in diameter, ten inches high), skirted with felt, is warmed with top heat as in nature, has plenty of air, and the chicks can crowd into no corners. Ventilator slides (12) control air in the brooder. A slide in top of hover or regulator working a damper adjusts the heat to the needs of the chicks, the air shaft passing through the radiator cooling it and making a circulation.

The hover and parts may be used independently. The brooder is three feet wide, six feet long, three feet front and two feet rear and will accommodate seventy-five chicks for best results.

DON'TS.

Don't feed rotten vegetables. They cause ptomaine poison and bring indigestion.

Don't wait till your birds are half dead with lice before you dust the crawlers.

Don't think when your birds are scored by a woman judge that sex decides intellects.

Don't use artificial heat in your poultry house nor bother heating the drinking water.

Don't let snow drift in nor make them sleep in cold air currents and eat snow for water.

Don't parade your failures before others nor print your bank account in the newspapers.

Don't keep at the business if it means debt after debt nor if you don't a good living get.

Don't expect to get big prices until you advertise and your stock gives you a good name.

Don't follow the judge all around the show. He'll know you're a sucker from the word go.

Don't feed musty grain. It causes the disease called "mold," which brings suffering untold.

Don't forget that high priced shells are often first prize sells. A hot air advertisement often covers a multitude of culls.

HOMEMADE EGG TESTER.

Make your own tester. Take a box fourteen inches high, with sides nine inches wide. Place door in front, cut hole in door one and one-half inches in diameter opposite flame and put an ordinary reflector back of a common lamp. Light passing from opening through egg quickly informs you if hatching eggs are good or market eggs are fossils.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

Cock and bull fights ushered in the new Cuban government. Countries that now see amusement in them will some day see the devil of them.

"Cast not your pearls before swine."
Remember this when your passions rise
To scratch out some fool knocker's eyes.

There is no green food for chicks equal to young, tender clover on the sod. They will hunt the four leaf clover and bring you luck.

It is a wise poultryman who has an original cut made of his fowls. There are only a few dealers in cuts, and they sell the same to so many that in some papers we see a half dozen advertisers using a similar picture. If you sell thoroughbreds it's rasping to see a cull dealer using the same illustration.

The call for laying pullets from such cities as New York and Philadelphia shows that our city friends are determined to have dependable eggs. As the demand was greater than the supply, the prices were high. Better raise more this year.

Our winter egg trade was mostly private, parties buying up our product and shipping to relatives and friends at a distance as well as using them at home. This style trade pays and saves trouble.

Now, when eggs get real cheap get rid of the mere layers, for in a short time they will not be payers.

A great many buy the hover and heating parts to a brooder and build the house part themselves. A brooder three feet wide, six feet long, three feet front and two feet rear costs complete $20, and the brooding and heating parts separate are rated at $7. If a man's handy with tools he ought to save money on the job.

The Russians, Hungarians and Bohemians still use goose quill pens. As most of the people in those countries make their cross, a quill can

HOUSE FOR GRAIN.

Rat and Mouse Proof For Storage Purposes.

A well built and handily arranged granary is without doubt one of the most necessary buildings on the farm. The grain house shown in the illustrations herewith has many advantages. It is rat and mouse proof and has ample storage room for farm implements. The grain may be loaded from the bins to the wagon without any labor, and the interior arrangement is such that it is not possible for grain to heat and mold or become sour.

The building may, of course, be built any size. The six posts that carry the structure in the drawing, which provides for a building 20 by 36 feet square, are 8 by 8 inches square and twenty feet long, set on a good solid foundation of stone or cement, with an iron pin in each post. The end sills and also the center girder are 8 by 10 inches square. The spaces between the posts are filled in with 2 by 10 inch floor timbers set twelve inches on centers. The floors should be six inch matched lumber and well seasoned.

The building is framed and braced by 2 by 4 scantling set twenty-four inches on centers around the entire building.

The open space below is seven feet in the clear and may be inclosed on two sides, as shown, or the front may be filled in with doors and the remaining three sides boarded up tight, or if desired all four sides may be left open.

The first floor is reached by a swing ladder or step that may be hooked to the floor timbers when not in use. A permanent stair should be built from the first to the second floor and located in one end.

The outer walls are covered with matched lumber and this in turn covered with drop siding or boarded up and down and battened. The inner walls are left bare to avoid having any hiding places for rats or mice, and if one should chance to get in a dog or cat could easily catch it.

The bins are made seven feet high at the rear, six at the front and six or seven feet wide.

The floor is sloping, as shown, and the bins should set some distance from the wall. The peculiarity of these bins is in the ventilation. Two three inch galvanized iron pipes are placed as shown, one at the bottom and one about the center. The pipes have one-half inch holes punched every eight inches on the top and bottom and the holes covered with screen wire. This may be soldered on or wrapped with wire. Four one inch holes are bored in the floor of the bin and also covered with screen wire. The open ends of the pipe and the holes in the floor allow a free play of fresh air through the grain at all times and also allow the moist, heated air to escape. No grain will mold in one of these bins. Not even buckwheat, the worst grain we have to heat, will be damaged.

Prolific Fields.

Perhaps the hardest point for the unprofessional man to understand is that two fields of soil may look alike, but one will yield seventy-five bushels of corn and the other nineteen. This very example may be seen at the Urbana (O.) experiment farm, where one field has been grown to corn exclusively for thirty years without manure or fertilizer of any kind. Last year it gave up less than nineteen bushels to the acre. Not ten rods away, with everything else the same, over seventy-five bushels to the acre were harvested, only because the necessary plant food had been replaced in the form of stable manure, etc., and because rotation had been practiced, using clover as one of the crops in the rotation scheme.

Starting a Balky Horse.

There is most always one horse in every lot that refuses to budge when time is called. A horseman who has had experience says: "We have seen a bad case conquered by the driver getting out of the wagon and patting the animal on the head for a minute. Then he picked up a stone, lifted up one of the animal's front feet from the ground and gave each nail a light tap and a smart tap on the frog. Then he dropped the foot quickly, jumped into the wagon and told the horse to go, and he did."

Prevention of Hog Cholera.

Dr. J. W. Connoway of the Missouri experiment station at Columbia has discovered a serum for the prevention of hog cholera. The serum is in the form of a vaccine, and if it is injected into the blood of a hog before it has become infected with cholera the hog becomes immune to the disease. The serum was discovered through the fact that when a hog has once recovered from an attack of cholera it is proof against another attack, even if it is exposed to diseased hogs, for it has developed something in its blood which makes it proof against the disease. The serum has been used on 1,500 hogs in different parts of the state, and very few have developed cholera after being properly vaccinated, although exposed to the disease. The serum is kept in supply by the agricultural department of the University of Missouri and will be dispensed free to the farmers of the state.

Bordeaux Mixture.

The bordeaux mixture is the proper remedy to use for all fungous troubles—viz, mildew and rust of beans, potato and tomato rot and leaf blight, melon and cucumber diseases, asparagus rust, celery leaf blight and rust, etc. The half strength mixture (two pounds copper sulphate, two pounds quicklime, fifty gallons water) is strong enough to use in the vegetable garden except for potatoes.
