Cure For Tardiness.

Superintendent Hug of the Eugene schools has a woodpile to which he refers boys who continue to come late. He finds after careful use of this refractory measure that the best of results are obtained. Usually one hour's work at the woodpile is enough to break any boy of being late. Speaking of the system, he says: "It is better than expelling, for then you don't lose your pupil, and it always accomplishes its purpose. I believe in using it sparingly, for if you use it too often, the wood would not last. It's influence is generally sufficient."
