Not Exceed 90,000 Bales This Year.

> It is now generally agreed that the hop crop of Oregon will not reach be-yond 85,000 or 90,000 bales at the ost during the present season, according to the commercial depart-ment of the Portland Journal. While the market for spot hops is somewhat better than last season, in > the east side sections—around Aurora, Woodburn, Silverton, Mount Aagel and Gervais, the outlook is no better than for 75 per cent of last year's crop, and that growth was rather short. The quality of this year's growth will be good everywhere, according to those that have viewed the yards recently. Those that have sprayed will have the best quality ever produced, while the unsprayed yards will show up quite fair owing to the aid given by the hot weather in ridding the vines of vermin.

In the vicinity of Eugene the con dition of the yards is much better than expected. For awhile, owing to the slow growth at the start of the season, forecasts for this year were cut about half from that of a year ago. This condition is now much improved and the outlook at present is for about the same yield as last year.

Hop Market Very Firm.

Hop market is very firm locally. The sale of 122 bales of the Marion Palmer lot and 30 bales of the Dervick lot as well as 43 bales from the Lee growth of 1909 to Mishler & Gribble of Aurora, late Saturday, was the highest price reached this season. Besides these Kola Neis purchased the Miller crop of 127 bales at Woodburn, while MeNeff Brothers took the last lot of old hops remaining in the state of Washington.

At the present time there are but 150 bales of the 1909 growth remaining in Oregon, while but a single lot of 1910s remains. The latter is owned by Al Jermain. Of the 1908 growth the reports of dealers show 122 bales Hop market is very firm locally.

the reports of dealers show 122 bales are outstanding of the 1906 and 1907 production

For every bale of these hops there are two orders at the present time but growers are getting their views suffi-ciently elevated to keep dealers from buying what few lots are left. No Contracting Showing.

While the market for sopt hops is Normal at Hood River.

Loads of campers, en route to the coast, pass through here daily.

Mrs. Edgar Crawford and son, Aubre, are visiting relatives here.

More than a through the few hundred bales that remain in this section, no business at all is passing for 1911 contracts. This is not due to any lack of demand, but to the mability of the contracts.

Rev. Walter French and family, of Kansas, visited several days this ing much effort to secure contracts, although there is not the doubt at this time that every bale that Mrs. Tom Jennings and Mrs. Zin- will be grown here this season could
