Doan's Kidney Pills relieve backache. Cure every kidney ail.

Many people in this locality recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's one case:

Z. Rosendorf, Front St., Independence, Oregon, says: "I do not believe there is a man in this county who has suffered as severely from kidney disease as I have during the past ten years. I had acute pains throughout my body and often my back was so weak and stiff that I could not stoop. My kidneys were also disordered and too frequent passages of the kidney secretions caused me to arise many times in the night. My limbs became badly swollen and there was a puffiness beneath my eyes. I doctored a great deal but did not receive relief until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. I felt better from the first and I continued taking them until every symptom was gone. Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life and for that reason I cannot praise them too highly"

The above statement was given on September 7, 1907, and on December 9, 1909, Mr. Rosendorf said: "The statement I gave for publication recommending Doan's Kidney Pills two years ago still holds good. I am glad to give Doan's Pills my endorsement."

New York's $1,000,000 Drydock And the Utah, a Future Occupant

Photos by American Press Association.

THE New York navy yard now has the largest drydock on the Atlantic coast and will soon be able to receive in it war vessels of the Dreadnought class. The cost of the big basin of masonry was about a million dollars, and it was eight years in building. The floating caisson, which will serve as a gate when the vessels under repair are docked, is the largest ever constructed. The battleship Utah, of 21,825 tons displacement, and her sister ship, the Florida, are the largest vessels that are likely to be docked there for some years to come.

A NEEDED CONSERVATION.

One bears much these days about conservation, particularly that which has to do with the husbanding and protecting of forms of material wealth, such as ores, coal, soil and water power. This is a praiseworthy movement, but there is another type of conservation that is of even more vital concern than that involving the relations that exist in the myriad homes of the land. There is little question that along this one line there are a dissipation of vital energy and a destruction of the best wealth of American homes—their peace and happiness—that are of greater moment than the waste in any material realm can possibly be. This waste takes place in the pulling and hauling, faultfinding, bitterness and dissension that curse and blast so many homes, weaken and impoverish so many lives, and in instances not a few actually induce fatal illness and result in both murder and suicide. The average person would call another a fool who, instead of oiling a machine which he wished to operate, put acid and sharp grit on all the bearings, yet in thousands of homes everywhere this same thing is done continually—the wearing parts of the home deluged daily with the acid of bitterness and dissension and the grit of selfishness and all around meanness when these same bearings should be kept clean and bright with cheerfulness and lubricated with kindness and real affection. The members of all too many homes seem to have missed the great fact that it is just as easy and a whole lot more profitable to be happy than miserable and that making the former condition a reality is the noblest kind of conservation.

TREE SURGERY.

There are one or two points connected with removing large limbs from shade trees that the novice at the job would do well to remember. The first is that the limb should be saved one-third through from the underside and a foot or two from the tree. Next a cut should be made with the saw on the upper side of the limb and a foot or so farther from the trunk than the cut on the underside. This should be continued until the weight of the limb causes it to fall. Instead of ripping a strip of bark off clear down to the tree, as is so often the case when the cut on the underside of the limb is not made, this will be prevented by the undercut mentioned. A stub will be left at this stage, and the final cut should then be made, saving this off as close to the trunk as possible without disturbing the bark and on a line parallel with the direction of the trunk. The aim should be to leave the cut in such shape that it will heal over in the shortest possible time. To prevent decay setting in to the trunk from the cut the latter should be given two or three coats of white lead paint or smeared over with a thin coating of grafting wax.

In a paragraph in this department a week or two ago referring to the fellows on the wet and low land having harvested bumper crops on such lands as a result of the dry seasons attention was called to the fact that tilling the land would produce the same condition of soil and give the same results. Through a typographical error the word "tilling" was used, which changed the meaning and sense of the paragraph completely.
