rad Stafrin.

A Good Answer.

A shopkeeper had for his virtues obtained the name of "the little rascal."
A stranger asked him why the appellation had been given to him.

"To distinguish me from the rest of my trade," quoth he, "who are all great rascals."—London Mail.

A Quaker Oath.

Two small boys in a family of friends, writes a contributor, had a disagreement, during which the elder boy became very much incensed.

Finally, no longer able to control himself, he took his brother by the shoulder and shook him, with the exclamation, "Oh, thee little you, thee!"

Then as the enormity of his offense came over him he said, in a changed voice, "Don't tell mother I swore."
—Youth's Companion.

Ingriating.

"This is the fifth time you have been brought before me," said the judge severely.

"Yes, your honor," smiled the offender. "When I like a feller I like to give him all my business. You see?"

"Sixty days," roared the judge.—Harper's Weekly.

Fame.

Fame is the inheritance not of the dead, but of the living. It is we who look back with lofty pride to the great names of antiquity, who drink of that good of glory as of a river and refresh our wings in it for future flight.—Has-till.
