The way to build up Dallas is to patronize Dallas people.

CARNEGIE'S NEW SCHEME.

There is a grim Scotch joke in the Carnegie fund for the pensioning of ex-presidents and he intends it to be on all of us, as a people, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. In the conditions to govern the pensioning of ex-presidents, and their unmarried widows, to the amount of $25,000 annually, it is stipulated that the fund shall continue, and the pensions be paid, until such time as the government makes a similar provision, or a more liberal one. This is the only thing which saves the plan from denunciation as a piece of supreme impudence. Mr. Carnegie would be pushing his philanthropy entirely too far but for this saving clause. As the case stands, we can only make ourselves ridiculous by heated protests of our ability to take care of our own. When we say that, Mr. Carnegie can answer with the three short words: "Do it now," supplemented with the assurance that he will take care of them until we are able to do so.

A question remains, of course, whether, after paying a man $300,000 for four years' service, and perquisites enabling him to maintain a respectable state without greater drain upon his salary than he might well make in private life, we are under obligation to pension him for the rest of his life, and his family after his death, at a figure commensurate with the maintaining of a large establishment. Pensioning an ex-president if the justice and necessity of such pensions be granted, need not mean pensioning them at a figure sufficient to maintain opulence. Such pensioning would not accord with American ideas and ideals. It smacks too much of the huge appropriations made annually by the Parliament at London for the support of the members of the royal family, parasites on the body of organized society. We should do nothing which can be taken to be a step toward the recognition of caste in this country.

Mr. Carnegie, plainly enough, is willing to take a step. It is clear that he has aimed to fix the minimum at which the government shall fix the pensions of ex-presidents, and their widows, for he sets out, in unmistakable words, that he makes the pension large in order to enable the recipients to live without work. We, the people of the United States, will have to see about that. First, we shall have to consider whether we are anything more to a man we have paid so hapdromely as to have enabled him to provide for the future. After that, if we think a continuing pension should be added to large temporary wages, we are likely to be careful not to put it at a figure more than enough to maintain a gentleman and his family in comfort. Pensioning people to live in idle splendor, as they do such things in Great Britain, is not a part of the American genius. If after we have acted either in falling to pension, or in pensioning lower than Mr. Carnegie's notions of such things he should continue willing to pay ex-presidents, or their widows, $25,000 a year, he will have turned his joke upon himself, particularly if none of the men he offers a pension should accept it when offered.

AS TO POSTMASTERS.

The following, from the Portland Journal, has so much local significance that The Observer gladly gives it place here:

"The political atmosphere is thick with applications by Democrats for postmasterships. It is no reproach on the Democrats, for in the open season, Republicans do the same thing. "One of the symptoms is the request by applicants for the endorsements of alleged prominent men. Why seek the aid of the politically prominent for a postmastership? "What better endorsement for such an office than enthusiastic support by residents of the community? One's own people's support and one's own fitness for the office are the best resources of an applicant, and without these no one is entitled to consideration.

The overwhelming home support of all the merchants, ministers, lawyers, farmers, doctors and others to be served by the postmaster is the best influence by any man who has it at his back, to make him postmaster. It is very probable that Woodrow Wilson, who is an example of the old Jeffersonian simplicity in office, holds exactly such a view. "The local community knows best as to qualifications and fitness. Prominent persons in distant places know far less, and their endorsements should go for nothing. It is the backing of the home people that counts, and that should count."

CANAL OPENING.

The New York Sun calls attention to the things essential to be done before the Panama Canal will be ready for actual, practical use. It is not merely a matter of finishing the last bit of masonry, advertising the fact that the canal will be ready for the first ship by a certain day, and when the ship arrives opening the gates, and with a metaphorical "there you go" set things in moving from one ocean to the other. There are various and sundry matters to be looked after as well as the completion of the canal work proper, and it is interesting and a bit instructive to know what some of those things are. It helps the better to appreciate the stupendous character of the task undertaken on the Isthmus and now about to be completed.

When the formal notice comes that the canal is ready for use, if the readiness is to be practical in effect, all comers must be accommodated as rapidly as the business will permit. In the first place the announcement will mean a rush of craft to the Isthmus for transit east and west. These vessels must be handled in order, and there must be preparation to handle them properly in every detail. There must be provision for docking, for coaling, for cleaning, for supplying with stores, and all such Provision must be made on a stupendous scale. In addition to all that the ships must take their turn, which will mean that there must be long piers at either end of the Atlantic side a great breakwater will have to be built to protect ships at their berths from storms. Coaling plants of 100,000 and 200,000 tons must be installed at Panama and Colon. Oil fuel tanks must be put up with a capacity of at least 10,000 barrels as estimated. There must be tugs and lighters and floating cranes as part of the auxiliary equipment. Finally there must be range towers at the entrance along the route, and a complicated system of lighting installed.

It will be seen from all this that even to complete the work at Panama would make strenuous demand upon executive genius—Portland Telegram.

From all portions of Oregon objection is made regarding the probable hanging of five condemned murderers at the state penitentiary on Friday, December 13, as announced by Governor West. The Governor has made this decision following the rejection of the bill at the recent election, proposing the abolishment of capital punishment in this state, and some of the loudest howls against the proposed proceedings come from those who worked and voted to defeat the bill. The Observer cannot see wherein they are justified in their present position. The people said they wanted legal murders continued and what difference does it make whether one man or a dozen men are killed on the same day? They have all been condemned to death by the courts and why prolong the agony?

BIG PRIZES FOR KNOWING HOW

Rewards Will Be Made for Knowledge of Dallas Affairs. Familiarity of the people of this city with the business houses, commercial and manufacturing institutions and professional men is a commendation to be wished for and encouraged by every conceivable means and all sorts of publicity. It is important alike for the people and the commercial interests of Dallas.

As means to this end The Observer will this week inaugurate a novel feature to be called the "knowledge competition." A number of brief sketches of business institutions will be printed giving some of their distinctive features and from these descriptions the public is asked to identify them.

To stimulate the competition several valuable prizes will be awarded to those who can identify them quickly and correctly. If you are not familiar with the city's growing commerce, it behooves you to get familiar both for the sake of local pride and of winning some of the prizes offered. This interesting feature has been used in many other cities of the west and it has been found a great success in disseminating knowledge of home institutions and drilling it into the minds of the people. Also it has proved a most excellent means of publicity.

—Diamonds and Cameo's in rings and brooches make elegant Christmas presents; best quality and right prices; open every evening until 2:30 p. m.; Saturday 10 p. m. Shepherd's Jewelry Store. 12-20

No Kick at Newberg. The Southern Pacific don't appear to be rushing the work of electrifying the Yamhill line at a rapid-fire rate, but with the service the company is giving Newberg, we have no kick to make. The fact is, better coaches are being used on this line than one will find on many of the roads running out of Indianapolis, and four passenger trains a day each way between Newberg and Portland, makes communication with the metropolis quite easy.—Newberg Graphic.

—For Christmas presents don't forget those diamonds, camcos, indestructible mesh bags, cuff links, ribbons, chains, charms, watches, bracelets, brooches, scarf pins, the clasps, silverware, cut glass, clocks, sterling silver, etc., etc., and the reduction in silver hollow ware and cut glass, all make excellent Christmas presents. Shepherd's Jewelry Store, open evenings.

After the "Poek." Albany is still working upon the task of driving the "blind pig" element from the city. A local paper of that city thinks that determined officials can stop the illicit traffic. Corvallis has demonstrated this. Foolish fellows will ever now and then imagine that they are shrewd enough to escape detection and attempt the illegal trade, but they will be caught and punished. Albany's determination means an end to that foul animal, the blind pig.

SEYMOUR, Superintendent of Schools, Polk County, Oregon. 12 2-12 17

OUR ADVERTISERS.

(By F. M. B.)

THE thinking and scheming department of every successful business concern is the advertising department. The highest salaried men in a city department store are the men who write the advertisements or decorate the windows. Very few business men have studied or understood the proper methods of attracting buyers to their places of business. The skillful copywriter fills his story to the newspaper readers rich with buying reasons and buying attractions. I am sure that Observer readers have in times past read with interest the advertisements of the Bee Hive Store of Dallas. These have been invariably planned by Mr. P. A. Finseth who has given not only special study to advertising but understands every detail of the business. Having climbed from the bottom of the business ladder, counter jumper at first in Sioux City, Iowa, Portland, Oregon, and then starting in a small way in Dallas several years ago, studying every detail of the business as he steadily progresses, he has been able to meet with the best of success. "Without proper advertising," said Mr. Finseth, "I could not have the proper method of attracting buyers to my place of business.
