PEOPLE'S ELECTRIC PAGE

ELECTRICITY MAKES HOUSEWORK EASY

Writer Says Housekeepers Are Negligent in Adopting Modern Methods.

"Housekeeping is the largest single industry known, yet it is the one which is the most backward in the utilization of modern science toward definite labor-saving ends," writes Helen Louise Johnson in the "Good Housekeeping" magazine.

Referring to electricity as a means for operating the many labor saving devices, Miss Johnson continues: "For look what it will do. A good electric clothes washer with wringer attachment may be purchased which will wash the clothes better and in a more scientific manner than they can be washed by hand. In our laboratory we have had occasion to experiment upon the hardest kind of washing; towels and cloths saturated with black greasy dirt. In one case it took us 12 minutes to wash these clean; in others we have had to let the washers operate from 20 to 25 minutes while we have been doing something else."

Correspondence Invited. The Electrical Page will be published each issue of The Observer. In connection with the page a column devoted to correspondence from the people will be conducted.

If you have any new idea of how to get the best use of electricity in your home, or have any question to ask pertaining to electricity or its many uses, let The Observer help you. A well-informed electrician will answer your questions.

Address, "Electricity," THE OBSERVER.

Chafing Dish Recipes. (Electric Cooker.)

Mined Mutton—Two cups chopped cooked mutton, yolks of six hard-boiled eggs, three-quarter teaspoon mixed mustard, salt, cayenne, one cup cream, one-quarter cup wine. Mash

"A washing that would take two hours to accomplish by these means would be rinsed, blued, and hung out in this time; for when one set of articles has come out of the washer, these can be finished and hung out, while the others are in process of cleansing."

"Ironing by electricity means the same amount of manipulation required as when ironing is done by any other means. The time is saved in the steady heat of the flatiron; that is, the heat is virtually continuous from start to finish. The woman's criticism of electric flatirons is that they get too hot rather than not give heat enough."

Hard to Choose Among the Many for Electric Lights. Have you been thinking of brightening up your house with some new lamp shades or reflectors. If so, your greatest trouble will be in selecting the prettiest from the pretty ones.

The portable table lamp is made a thing of beauty as well as of use with the addition of an ornamental shade, while wall or ceiling lamps may always be dressed to suit the furnishings and decorations of the rooms.

Work Made Fun. "It is fun, not labor, to use a sewing machine run by a motor attachment. The same motor, or that on the washing machine, can be used to turn the ice-cream freezer, the bread, or cake mixer, the coffee grinder, or meat chopper, as desired. The uses of the utility motor are many, and yet the weary housewife patiently turns the crank by hand."

If it's Electrical it's convenient, clean, safe, sanitary, labor-saving, MODERN.

Your ironing costs you too much in strength and time if you don't use an Electric Iron.

To make the clothes last longer use a modern electric washer and wringer. A few cents pays for current.

Most women would rather do two ironings with an Electric Iron than one with an old-fashioned iron.

Don't you want your wife to have an Electric Iron to save her time and strength?

The fascination of seeing things cook on the table by electricity stimulates the appetite. Ever taste Electric toast?

THE PERPLEXING QUESTION OF THE YEAR

Is what to buy at a moderate cost as a Christmas gift for mother, wife, sister or friend, that will combine all the elements of necessity, practicability, and appropriateness.

The following are offered as suggestions for Christmas gifts: If she has a sewing machine give her a Sewing Machine Motor to do all the hard work.

An Electric Toaster-Stove for the newly-weds. They'll use it and think of you every meal.

If anybody on your list uses a hot water bottle, then the Electric Heating Pad that Stays hot always is the very thing.

For the baby: An Electric Food Warmer. Turn the switch and the milk is warm in a jiffy.

An Electric Cigar Lighter for Brother Dick. It will light his cigars for the rest of his life.

Don't you want your wife to have an Electric Iron to save her time and strength?
