CHAUTAUQUA SIDELIGHTS

Miss Charlotte Berg, the soprano of the Artist's Trio which appeared on Saturday afternoon and night, lives in Boise, Idaho, and is an old friend of the John C. Uglows. She was entertained at their home while in the city and Sunday Mr. Uglow motored to McMinville with the company. Miss Berg is known as "the Idaho Nightingale."

Miss Belle Kearney who delivered her interesting lecture "Old Days in Dixie Land" at the Chautauqua on Saturday afternoon, is an old acquaintance of J. H. Catherwood and daughter, and the three enjoyed a pleasant visit during the former's stay in Dallas.

There ought to be some way to eliminate the motorcycle nuisance and the idiots who have no more sense than to disturb the afternoon meetings by operating their machines near the big tent. On several occasions it has been necessary for performers to stop in the midst of their program and wait until some soft-headed chap had run his roaring, popping machine out of earshot. The machines should not be allowed on the grounds.

Why do people who visit, not only the Chautauqua, but other public assemblies persist in permitting their dogs to accompany them? Some pay absolutely no attention to their dogs but allow them to enter public meetings and if it is necessary to remove the animals from the room, which it usually is, they let others attend to it.

While the big tent was crowded last night, many people saved their money by remaining outside, and even up town several blocks away from the park people could be seen sitting quietly on their porches and taking in the band concert.

One of the happy incidents in connection with the present assembly was the unexpected meeting this morning of Miss Nellie Collins, of Dallas and Miss Grace Miner, who has charge of the Indian work and the story telling hour at the Chautauqua. Miss Miner was a student under Miss Collins when the latter was critic at the South Dakota State Normal school at Madison, several years ago and the two had not met for years. Neither knew that the other was here until this morning when Miss Collins chanced to visit the Indian work when she was astonished to find her friend. Miss Collins was connected with the State Normal for 12 years and it was during this time that Miss Miner attended the institution and graduated. For the past eight years she has been employed as a teacher in the Omaha public schools. Miss Miner will be entertained at tea tonight at the Collins home.

Miss Elta Dillard, of Roseburg, was a week end visitor with relatives in Dallas. Miss Dillard is a granddaughter of Mrs. Eliza Shultz, and is attending summer Normal at Monmouth.

Lloyd Rice now has a position as clerk in the Dallas postoffice. Mr. Rice took the civil service examination for the place May 10 and stood the highest among the applicants and hence his name comes first in the list of those eligible for any vacancy that occurs.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Toozee, Jr., will leave on Thursday for Prineville, Ore., for a few days' stay where Mr. Toozee is called on legal business. During his absence, Ed. F. Coad will look after all legal business under Mr. Toozee's care. The party will motor into Prineville from The Dalles.

W. P. Lord was a visitor in the city on the Fourth, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Uppjohn. Mr. Lord is a son of former Governor Lord, who was also at one time chief justice of the supreme court and ambassador to the Argentine Republic. Mr. Lord is now practicing law in Portland.

A local of the Farmers' Society of Equity was organized last night at the Liberty school house southwest of the city by County Organizer Petty. Mr. Petty will hold a meeting tonight at the Rickreall hall to take the preliminary steps toward organizing there. He says the people of that vicinity are very much interested in the movement.

While at work at some minor repairs at the mill on Sunday, Verne Compton, edgerman at the plant of the Dallas Lumber & Logging company had his right hand severely injured when the wrench he was handling slipped allowing his hand to strike the sharp edges of the saw teeth. It was necessary to take several stitches in the hand and Mr. Compton will be absent from his post for several days.

Work of demolishing the meat market building at the corner of Main and Mill streets to clear the site for the new Dallas City bank building began this morning. The meat market will move to the restaurant room in the Uglow block on Mill street, and the saloon building will be moved to the lots on Mill street formerly owned by Ed. Jacobson and now occupied by wooden shacks which will be removed.

CHAUTAUQUA SESSION SCORES

(Continued from Page One.) largely of popular music and as such caught the fancy of the greater number of the audience. The story telling of Francis J. Gable who occupied the second place on the program and the work of Harrell, the magician, was also applauded, although it must be confessed that Harrell presented nothing new and none of his work was what might be termed marvelous.

Saturday's Program. The dominating feature of the Saturday program was Senator Burkett's lecture at night on "The New Woman and the Young Man." For an hour and 20 minutes the Senator held the closest attention of his audience, and while his remarks were generously interspersed with stories and anecdotes that kept his hearers convulsed with laughter, each anecdote bore a moral and was used to more forcibly emphasize his points. Senator Burkett is one of the most noted platform orators in the United States today. He has filled circuits for several seasons and has also delivered many lectures on independent dates in some of the largest cities in the country. The theme of his lecture deals with the pathway of life—opportunities that the young men have overlooked and that the young women have been quick to appropriate for themselves. Thus we see that the young women who are graduating from our high schools and other institutions of learning in much greater proportion than the young men, are rapidly supplanting men in many of the occupations which, for years, have been usurped almost wholly by the latter. This result is accomplished, according to the Senator, by closer application to study and by more definite ambition. The young men of today are apt to think that the opportunities do not exist as in the days of the past—that their fathers had much better chances than theirs, and many other excuses. But the man with a purpose, with an ambition to do and to make something of himself, finds that there are many chances for him in this world and many things for him to do.

The Artists' Trio. Another entertaining feature of Saturday's program was the work of the Artists' Trio, among whom is Carl Staackenberg, violinist. It is not too much to say that Staackenberg gave one of the most accomplished renditions on the violin that Dallas music lovers have heard for many days—in fact it is doubtful if his equal has ever been heard in this vicinity. He showed a wonderful mastery over his instrument and his technique and expression left nothing to be desired. The work of Miss Charlotte Berg, soprano, in several classic selections, was also warmly applauded.

"Days in Dixie Land." Miss Belle Kearney, brought us a fragrant breath from the Sunny South in her interesting lecture and every one who heard her on Saturday afternoon was enthusiastic in praise of her lecture. One of the chief charms of her lecture was her manner of delivery which surpassed anything of the kind ever heard in Dallas, and before she was half through she had won the hearts of her audience, from the youngest boy or girl on the front seat to the oldest person in the big tent.

Sunday's Entertainment. The two programs given on Sunday afternoon and night partook largely of the nature of the day. For the musical portion of both programs we had the Georgia jubilee singers of note. There were six of them, all colored, and they gave their numerous selections, mainly composed of "camp meeting shouts" with a finish and rendition that pleased the audiences and brought them enthusiastic applause.

The feature of the afternoon, however, was the reading by Della Crowder Miller of two acts from "Ben Middleton took first prize and S. H. Petre carried away second. Both had tastefully decorated machines but, owing to a provision made by the committee the town cars were placed in one class and the country machines in another, in order that all might enter on an equal footing. Other features of the parade was the float by the "Campfire Girls" which brought forth much enthusiastic applause. The float consisted of a large platform upon which was displayed the paraphernalia of the organization, but the predominating feature was the display of entrancing femininity arrayed in the panoply of the camp.

The judges of the automobile parade were C. C. Gardner, Ralph Savery and A. S. Campbell. Following the parade to the city park the seating capacity of the grandstand was soon filled and the program substantially as heretofore published, was carried out, with the exception that Senator Burkett failed to arrive. Mayor J. G. Van Orsdel acted as president of the day and Glen O. Holman read the Declaration of Independence. Mr. Van Orsdel announced that owing to some misunderstanding the speaker of the day would not be present and in the meantime Mr. Holman filled in some of the time with a few appropriate remarks and Francis Gable, of the Ellison-White Chautauqua system told a few interesting stories that pleased the crowd. The vocal music by the special chorus under the direction of Fred Zeller was a feature of the morning program.

The failure of Senator Burkett to reach Dallas, was through no fault of the local committee. He had been informed that he was to deliver the oration here and had made all arrangements to do so. He came on from Eugene early Friday morning, intending to take the S. F. C. & W. train from Salem to this city, arriving at 11 o'clock. In the meantime, however, he had been informed that an automobile would call for him and bring him to Dallas. He therefore waited for the automobile that never came, while the committee here expected him on the 11 o'clock passenger. Although arrangements had been made to bring the Senator to this city here in time to take part in the parade, the rain of the night before caused the abandonment of this plan and the Chautauqua system's representatives in Salem pointed to meet him at the train and ask him to come on the passenger. This message, the Senator says, was never delivered, hence his failure to make connections.

Afternoon Sports. The sports of the afternoon were witnessed by a tremendous crowd at Dallas college campus and here again, the committee feel that an apology is due. The ball game between Dallas and Willamina was a great disappointment to the crowd as well as to the home club and the committee, resulting in favor of Dallas by the score of 17 to 0. It might just as well be 34 to 0 for the locals played rings around the Yamhill bunch. The Willamina team was represented as a strong organization and a spirited contest was expected. For several days Manager Serr, of Dallas had been exerting every effort to secure a team to play here on the Fourth but invariably found that all were engaged. It finally transpired that Willamina was the only team available so the deal was closed with them.

The contest between the "Old Stiffs of Dallas" and a nine picked up from the country provoked considerable merriment and was really the feature of the afternoon. It resulted in favor of Dallas by the score of 19 to 6.

The other contests which consisted of races and other sports were entertaining and interesting. The day closed with a session of the Chautauqua which was well attended, and a display of fireworks on the college campus.

There was nothing ordinary about the big automobile parade which came off practically on time. The threatening weather resulting in delaying the start a few minutes as, up to the last hour, it was expected that the rain would come and hence some of the artists were slow in starting. Led by the Rickreall band, the parade started at the public school building and moved through such of the streets in the business district as it was possible to use, and everywhere the splendidly decorated machines and floats were greeted with expressions of admiration. Here again the judges had a difficult task as all of the decorated cars were alighting and showed the expenditure of much labor on the part of those who had toiled to make them beautiful. Cut flowers were the predominating feature in the displays, although, in some of the cars, the national colors and flags were used to advantage. The first prize went to the Dallas Woman's club, J. C. Uglow's Cartier driven by himself being used. The theme of this car was red, and the decorations used were red roses, the blossoms of which had been sewed to burlap completely covering the machine. In the car rode Mrs. J. R. Craven, president of the club and the heads of the different departments. The second prize was awarded to the Artisans' club, which was arranged on General Staffin's Cadillac and was driven by Mrs. Staffin. This display was entrancing and called forth favorable comments all along the route.

Honorable Mention. Only first and second prizes were offered but favorable mention by the committee was accorded to the Knights of Pythias car, "Prune Knob Orchards" R. L. Chapman's Cadillac driven by himself and the "Red Cross Car" driven by Dr. V. C. Staats, his Overland being utilized. All of these cars were beautifully arranged, the latter especially, being decorated entirely in white, with a red cross prominently displayed above the engine hood. Red crosses also appeared on the wheels. In the car rode Dr. Staats and nurses from the Dallas hospital in their regulation uniform. Mr. Chapman's machine was dressed in white with flags and flowers, the words "Prune Knob Orchards" appearing on one side and "Prune City" on the other, both done in prunes. It was a tastefully decorated machine and essentially typical of Dallas, "The Prune City."

The Knights of Pythias car used no flowers but was tastefully decorated in the national colors and the colors of the order. In it rode the officers of the order. The machine used was Charles Bilyeu's big Mitchell. For the out of town cars, James Hur." To many Ben Hur has appeared as rather a dry and uninteresting story, while others have been carried away with the work and the beauty of the sentiment. But all who heard Mrs. Miller on Sunday afternoon, and the tent was well filled with an interested audience, found something in Ben Hur that they didn't know the story possessed and through every minute of its rendition by this accomplished and capable woman, accomplished and capable woman, they sat enthralled completely and away with the beauty of the tale and the magical manner in which it was presented. Mrs. Miller is a dramatic interpreter and impersonator of rare ability and of charming delineations and manner and in her delineations there is none of the apparent posing there is so often noticed in similar work. Every one of the large audience who heard the beautiful story on Sunday afternoon, was transported back through the mists of centuries and in place of the tent, listening people and the woman who was telling the story, they saw the bleak hills of Palestine, the olive trees and the cedars, and they saw the mighty cavalcade sweeping out from the city of Jerusalem led by the two wretched lepers crowding close to the roadside lest the Great One pass them unnoticed; saw the Master stop and they even saw the healing miracle performed. It was all so vivid, so real, so present, under the magic spell of this wonderfully gifted woman. It was an occasion that will live long in the memory of those who heard it.

Greecian is Heard. Sunday evening Julius Caesar Nayple delivered his unique lecture "The Land of the Crescent and the Cross" and here again the audience heard something out of the ordinary. Nayple is a native of Athens although he moved with his parents to Palestine when a mere child. He has been in this country eight years and he has been educated in one of our foremost universities. He told the audience many interesting things about the Holy Land and devoted a large portion of his time to relating the amusing experiences he underwent in learning the English language and the ways of the country. He described in detail the manners and the customs of his native country and enacted a mock marriage as it is performed in Greece, using four young ladies picked from the audience, whom he clad in the showy costumes of his native land. Nayple is an accomplished speaker, and held the closest attention of his audience. His lecture was "something different" from those usually heard but it was entertaining and instructive and gave us many new thoughts in relation to the history and the manners and customs of the far East.

Morning Programs Enjoyable. The programs given each morning consisting of the Seton Indian games for the children and the lectures and readings by Mrs. Miller have generally been attended by large crowds, although it has been impossible for so many to be present as in the afternoon or at night. But those who have been there have been entertained, as the morning hour is really the intellectual and educational portion of the Chautauqua. The Observer would be pleased to give each different event the attention and the notice they deserve, but limited space and time prevents. We can assure readers of this paper, however, that when we say that the morning programs have proved enjoyable and entertaining to a degree, we but voice the unanimous sentiment of those who have been so fortunate as to attend.

Great Closing Day. Tomorrow, the closing day of the Chautauqua will, it is declared prove the most entertaining of all the entertaining features of the week. It is known as "Lincoln Day" and the dominating feature on the program, will be the appearance at night of Ben Chapin the notable impersonator of Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Chapin has given this lecture, or more properly speaking this "representation" all over the country and has appeared in the largest cities of the land, holding the attention of large audiences for an entire evening at the first-class theatres, and it has been more widely talked about and praised than any single act or lecture on the American platform today. There is every indication that a large crowd will hear this wonderful program.

Something About Beds

(SANITARY BEDS---no bugs)

It has been clearly proven that one-third of a healthy, vigorous person's lifetime must be passed in slumber. The balance of the time, according to government statistics, is naturally devoted to labor. The Sterling Furniture Company decided recently to permit the government to look after the statistics while the unfortunate one-third were being cared for.

THE CONSEQUENCE—A new bunch of Beds, absolutely bug-proof. Mattresses to match. Springs that fit the anatomy. Cribs for the Kiddies, too. Same sanitary precautions. The goods just received and now on exhibit have the easy-rolling steel caster.
