The way to build up Dallas is to patronize Dallas people.

YES, WE SHOULD WORRY.

When the prunes are in the dryer, And the hops are jumpin' higher, And the winter crop of 'taters are a restin' in the bin;
Then it's time to tune the lyre, Sing a song of gladness, squire, Toast your shins up to the fire, We should worry and get thin!

NO TRESPASSING.

With the farmers of Polk county who have dared to flaunt the red flag in the face of city hunters by tagging the familiar sign of "No Trespassing" on tree and fence, there can be no quarrel, for most certainly his motives in so doing are justified. He does so not so much for the protection of his property and even with the hunting season in Oregon just fairly begun, evidence of his sound judgment has been shown. In Marion county a valuable cow was shot and killed the other day. Two years ago a Polk county rancher lost one of his most valuable horses because the city hunter imbued with the spirit of adventure playfully tested the strength of his gun on the animal.

Then there is another side to look upon. Hunting is a sport that nearly everybody enjoys and it is amusing, surely, to watch and feed several flocks of birds throughout the months of the closed season only to have a lone poacher slip in through the fence when the owner is not looking. Notices and warnings are not directed to the people who have common sense and grace enough to ask permission to hunt.

A lesson, and one which will long be remembered, was taught a young man living near Newburg recently. Disregarding the law absolutely, he went hunting several days before the season opened. While standing in the corner of one field he shot at and killed a Chinese female pheasant in another field. He was arrested, fined for trespassing on both properties, for shooting pheasants out of season and for killing a female bird.

Trespassing signs do not necessarily indicate the evidence of a churchwarden. It is the lack of common courtesy and common sense with which he has contended with for years that prompts him to take advantage as the last resort of a law which was drawn for his own protection.

Now that the state attorney general has ruled that the matter of adjusting water rates in Dallas comes under the jurisdiction of the State Railway commission, residents of the city are perfectly satisfied to await the decision of the officials. If our water rates are exorbitant we want a reduction. If on the other hand, the water company is receiving only just compensation from their patrons for its investment and the sale of its wares, we want to know that too. It is only fair play to Mr. Gates and the city alike, and the definite settlement of this question will surely come as a relief to all concerned.

Dallas members of the Woman's club will assist in securing a women's building for the University of Oregon. It is the purpose of members of the club in various cities throughout the state to join in the movement, and the first definite steps in this direction was taken at the convention which ended yesterday at Hood River. The purpose is a most worthy one, and Dallas is certain to furnish its share toward the completion of the proposed structure.

Have the "movies" the world by the ears? According to a recent article which appeared in the Wall Street Journal, they have, and that excellent financial adviser also asserts that throughout the world the picture business is collecting more money than automobiles.

Wagner Worship.
"There is no such worship of national genius in America as prevails abroad," said a recently returned tourist. "In Germany, for instance, at the opera the scale of prices varies according to the composer, Wagner, of course, commanding the top notch admission. But the most peculiar feature of this musical adoration is that it affects the toilets as well. With the elaborate gowning of a New York audience in mind, I approached our landlady as to the propriety of appearing at the opera in such a makeshift costume as my tourist wardrobe afforded. 'It depends entirely upon the composer you intend to hear, fraulein,' was her astonishing reply. 'For some your present attire would be perfectly proper, but if it is the great Wagner you are to hear'—She broke off, but an expressive shrug of the shoulders told plainer than words that it would be an affront to his ashes to appear in anything but the most stunning and up to date evening gown."—New York Tribune.

When Thanks Were Given.
Many years ago a noted chief of the tribe of Chippewa Indians while hunting wounded a deer and followed it for miles. The chase was long and very severe, and the Indian was in the last stages of exhaustion from fatigue and lack of food and water when he found himself on the top of a wonderful mountain, at the foot of which nestled a beautiful lake crystal clear. From the surface of the lake trout leaped, and upon the shore lay the deer he had hunted. Here were food, water, fish and fuel for cooking.
Raising his hand and facing the setting sun, the exhausted chief exclaimed, "Ish-pem-ing," which in the Chippewa tongue means "heaven" or "the place on high."
The story was remembered, and the name given by the Indian was adopted by the white settlers when the present city of Ishpeming, Mich., was formed. —Ladies' Home Journal.

Inexperienced.
In a boarding house for bachelors Amanda, a typical "mammy," looked after the guests' comfort in true southern style, so well that one of the men thought he would take her away with him in the summer in the capacity of housekeeper. Toward spring he waylaid her in the hall one day and said: "Mandy, do you like the country?" Mandy reckoned she did.
"Would you like to go away with me this summer and keep house for me?"
Mandy was sure she would.
"Suppose I got a bungalow. Do you think you could take care of it nicely by yourself?"
Mandy gasped and rolled her eyes.
"Deed, no, massa! Reckon you all better get somebody else; I don't know nothin' 'bout takin' care of any animals."—Harper's Magazine.

Antiquity of Nagging.
No, if you are nagged you are not alone in your experience. Nor are the nagged persons of this age the only nagged persons of any age. Nagging is an old custom. They tell us that Adam, Job, Socrates, Aesop, Leonidas, Machiavelli and many more distinguished historical personages were victims of nagging. This proves the antiquity but not the wisdom or the respectability of nagging. And if it is as old as it is claimed to be let it crawl away somewhere to die. For come to think of it, nagging is so hurtful to the nagger as it is to the nagged. So why injure ourselves for the purpose of injuring some one else? Samson did that, you know, when he pulled down the temple of Gaza and broke his own back. Rather a poor example to follow, eh?—Detroit Free Press.

Wrote in Bed.
Mark Twain wrote nearly all his later books in bed. So persistent a "sluggard" was he that he had a specially contrived bed desk fitted up so that he could write without trouble or exertion while propped luxuriously among his pillows. He used to aver that most of his best thoughts came to him in bed and that the trouble and worry of getting up, shaving and dressing dispensed them all and left him in no mood for commencing his literary labors. He was of opinion that bed was the very best place for the author, and he acted upon his belief.

Careless.
"Have you made a special study of the subject on which you are going to lecture?"
"No," replied the gifted speaker. "I tried that once, and I got so interested in the subject that I didn't have time to write the lecture."—Washington Star.

Man's Love For Woman.
"If a man loves a woman for her looks he will love her for five years. If he loves her mind he will love her for ten years. If he loves her ways he will love her forever." And every woman believes when she marries that her lover loves her ways.—Exchange.

Consolation.
"Would you marry a man who has the reputation of being not more than half witted?"
"No, but I'll be a sister to you."—Houston Post.

Cynical.
