ABOVE THE CIVIL LAW
Governor West has taken possession of Copperfield by military force. He has set aside the civil law and has established martial law. Martial law is entire suspension of all civil or ordinary governmental processes, and is substitution of the rule of a military commander who becomes at once in his own person the law or whatever law there is.

MAIL ORDER HOUSES KEEP POSTED.
As the new parcel post rates are now in force the mail order houses are reading the county papers and watch the advertisements with eagle eyes. When they find that the merchants do not use the papers to advertise their goods they immediately flood that county with their catalogues, they will know that the farmer wants to see the prices in black and white. The Hillsboro Independent publishes the plan outlined by a merchant of that town to meet the condition and give the mail houses a setback. It says:
The plan suggested by the Hillsboro merchant was for the business men to unite and buy space in the local mation. Now the saloons are closed, and the Governor purposes, he says, to keep them closed. The issue is clearly made between the Governor, who supersedes the civil law, and the men of Copperfield, who have captured and have been using the machinery of law for their own benefit, but who have nevertheless not broken the laws. If the Copperfield episode stood by itself, it might not be significant or ominous. It is impossible to defend or excuse the saloons there, and it is impossible to justify the methods by which they have been licensed and maintained. But underlying this unpleasant situation is the fundamental question of law observance and law respect by Governor as well as by saloon-keepers. If the Governor of Oregon by his frat and the exercise of the military power of the state may suppress the saloon-keepers and destroy the saloons of Copperfield, he may suppress the saloon-keepers and destroy the saloons of Portland. If he may act in this arbitrary and extraordinary fashion against the saloons, he may move against any other institution displeasing him. He may interfere with and control the government of Portland or any city in the state, or the state itself, to bring about any result whatever, and the only limits to his executive prerogative are his ability to carry out his plans.

It does not meet the question to say that the end is justifiable. That may be conceded, and is conceded; but the means are nevertheless reprehensible. The Governor who uses his extraordinary power for you, in any emergency, may by your approval be encouraged to use the same power against you, in any other emergency. It is therefore a most dangerous and unwarrantable exercise of power. It is a grave thing to suspend civil authority. It is an unheard-of proceeding anywhere in any civilized government, except in times of rebellion or great public peril. No such situation exists anywhere in Oregon.—Oregonian.

papers for a year, the space to be filled with cards of the different merchants. In effect this would be a business directory and would at least inform the readers of the papers, many of whom, it must not be forgotten, are newcomers, what lines of business are represented in Hillsboro. This business man figured that there are more than 100 different concerns in the city, only a small proportion of which invite trade or let the people know they are in business through the columns of the papers.

The Independent has believed merchants have not availed themselves of this method of meeting outside competition to the extent they might. The business directory plan cannot but accomplish good and emphatically advertise the business resources of the city, but we believe in addition a strong effort to attract business should be made by detailed description of weekly offerings and if possible the prices which are asked.

Of course there is the merchant who says advertising does not pay, but he has his answer in the statement of the catalogue house manager. Used intelligently as the catalogue house uses it, it returns a big per cent on the investment, but it should always be considered an investment and not an expense.

Specially illustrated editions of weekly newspapers as Christmas and New Year's numbers, have been less this year than usual. Illustrations come high and most newspapers are coming to the same conclusion that the extra money invested in "special editions" is of much more value to the reader if divided over the year and thus make each issue better.

FIRE NOTICE
The general alarm is rung from the office of the Telephone Company. Every telephone in this city is a Fire Alarm Box. In case of fire, call Central Operator in the ordinary manner, giving her your name and telephone number. Then the nearest cross street location to the fire.

If the public will carefully observe this notice, it will greatly facilitate matters and give the firemen an opportunity to pick the best route, and locate the nearest hydrant to the fire.
