TAMING THE NEW HUSBAND

The Bride Finds Training Him to Run in Double Harness a Task That Calls For Tact and Discretion.

THE young bride was crying her eyes out. "What is it all about?" inquired the sage and middle aged friend who had just dropped in for the evening. "It's Dick," the sorrowing one answered. "I never see him at all except in the evening, and lately he's had so many excuses for going out or staying downtown after dinner that I'm afraid he's tired of me."

The sage friend smiled. She had been married, to these many years and was one of those women whose knowledge of men is comfortably seasoned with charity.

"Not a bit of it, honey," she replied. "He's just like all untamed male beings. The newly married man is still a bachelor at heart, and at times comes the uncontrollable hankering for the latchkey and the freedom of bachelorhood. After awhile, if you are wise, he will settle down and forget that he ever trotted anything but double harness. But if you go about it tactlessly he may take offense."

"Some husbands are born tame, others achieve tameness, but for the most part new husbands must have tameness thrust upon them."

"The average young wife finds that the taming of the wild bachelor she has captured is a longer and more troublesome business than she ever anticipated. You cannot butter his feet and set him down by the fire like a strange cat and say to him, 'Sit there and be good.'"

"Neither can she at once cure him of the restlessness and wild yearning for exclusively male society from which he is bound to suffer. But there is no need to make a tragedy of the restlessness. If he refuses the delights of playing cards or listening to the piano; if he does not want to stay indoors and doesn't want to go out, if he strolls about the house looking disconsolately at the furniture and pictures as though they had all done him a personal injury, you will know that he is merely suffering from one of those attacks of restlessness that overcome even the very best of husbands sometimes."

"All free human beings suffer more or less from this hatred of being shut up. And if you, with generations of domestication behind you, suffer occasionally from wild revolt against being 'housebound,' your newly captured bachelor is similarly afflicted to an even greater degree."

"Hitherto, like the wind that bloweth where it listeth, he has come and gone at his own sweet will. When a dreamy, absent look comes into his eyes, when he refuses point blank to hang the new pictures that have come home from the frame's when he sharpens his razors in sheer ennui and timidly suggests that he would like to call around to see a bachelor friend, do not stay him."

"He may quite possibly appear unwilling to leave you to your own devices for a few hours. He may even need your persuasion to go. Yet if you slip him from his leash with willingness and, ascertaining that he has his latchkey, declare cheerfully that you are not going to sit up for him you have done more to tame your wild bachelor than you know."

Staining the Kitchen Floor.
When it is necessary to stain the kitchen floor see that the work is done thoroughly. Given closely laid boards, with well planed and even surfaces, there is no better or cheaper treatment for any floor than a stained and polished border. This entails little initial expense, and a weekly rub with beeswax and turpentine will keep it in excellent order for years.

A simple stain can be made by dissolving two ounces of permanganate of potash (bought in crystals) in a pint of boiling water. Make a soft pad of linen and bind this to a stick. Apply the stain to the boards with this mop, being careful not to touch the hands with the preparation.

Two or more applications may be given, according to the depth or color desired, always allowing twenty-four hours between each application. When the floor is quite dry rub it over with a piece of flannel dipped in linseed oil, and after this is thoroughly absorbed the final polish of beeswax and turpentine may be given.

Putting on Buttons.
If the tongues of ladies' or children's old white or tan shoes are not too much worn they should be removed, cut into pads about the size of a quarter or half dollar and stored in a small box. When a button is required on a boy's knickers or on any garment subject to great stress, place one of the pads on the inner side of the garment where the button is to be sewn on. Tack it securely round. Sew on the button in the usual way, always remembering to put a knot on your thread between the button and the cloth, also to put a good winding of thread round the neck of the button as this is a source of strength. Buttons sewed on in this manner will never drag a hole in the material.

Using Insertion.
Sew a small button on each end of the insertion which trims an apron or underwear, and a small loop on each end of the ribbon. Then place the loop over the button and with a tape needle draw the ribbon through and tie in the center. All that is necessary when removing ribbon before sending to the laundry is to take the loop off the button. By doing this it is not necessary to untie the bow or to bother about sewing the ribbon on each time.

Seventeenth Century Civility.
If the seventeenth century Englishman failed in his manners it was not for want of instruction. "The Rules of Civility," a book published in 1675, contains the following hints on good behavior: "Being in discourse with a man, 'tis no less than ridiculous to pull him by the Buttons, to play with the Bandstrings, Belt or Clank; or to punch him now and then on the Stomach! 'tis a pleasant sight, and well worthy of laughter, to see him that is so punctured, fall back, and retire; whilst the other, insensible of his absurdity, pursues and presses him into some corner, where he is at last glad to cry quarter, before his comrade perceives he is in danger." And again: "It argues neglect, and to undervalue a man, to sleep when he is discoursing or reading; therefore good manners command it to be forbid; besides, something there may happen in the act that may offend, as snoring, sweating, gasping or dribbling."
